Failure to Cut Relief Burden Creates New Budget Care

Permanent CCC Of 300,000 Seen

Less Than Half Billion Will Be Requested, Says Roosevelt.

By Felix Bruner.

Failure of the relief rolls to decline as rapidly as had been anticipated added yesterday to the budget problem, which President Roosevelt continued to discuss with heads of his relief agencies.

A report by Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress administrator, showed that in 145 cities the relief load had dropped only an average of 9.4 per cent in November, compared with October. The report was accompanied by a statement that depletion of individual resources and growing winter needs had aggravated the situation.

The President yesterday turned his attention particularly to the CCC, which he has said he would like to see continued on a permanent basis with an enrollment of about 300,000. The program calls for a reduction in the number of camps from 2,428 to 1,456 by June 30. The enrollment at present is 460,000, and at its peak it was more than 500,000.

Popularity Stressed.

Robert Fechner, CCC director, and the President have received complaints from citizens in various sections of the country against the proposed reduction in the organization. The Administration has been impressed with the popularity of this phase of the relief program.

While the only official hint concerning the probable budget set-up was President Roosevelt's statement that less than $500,000,000 would be asked for specific public works projects, the possibility that no emergency relief appropriation would be asked was being discussed. This would leave, besides appropriations for normal operating expenses, only appropriations for public works and for the CCC. Both of these are being looked upon now as permanent set-ups, rather than emergency organizations.

The possibility that no additional relief appropriation may be necessary to carry the program from the beginning of the next fiscal year, July 1, at least to the meeting of the next Congress—in January, 1937—arises from the fact that the $4,880,000,000 appropriation was made for a two-year period.

At even an accelerated rate of expenditure, the normal result of increases in PWA and WPA employment, experts have estimated that nearly $1,000,000,000 will be left over at the end of the present fiscal year. This money will be available without the necessity of including it in the budget or of reappropriating it.

This huge balance, together with the $500,000,000, or less, for public works, and an appropriation for the CCC, may constitute the entire relief budget. These sums might enable the Administration to carry on during the first six months of the fiscal year, past the election, and into the next session of Congress, where a deficiency appropriation could be jammed through to meet expenses until the end of the 1936-1937 fiscal year.

A plan of this kind could account for the hint that the comparative smallness of the new budget will be "surprising." The budget for so-called ordinary expenditures is expected to exceed

Army Chief to Seek 2,320 Combat Planes

Air Force 'Second to None' U. S. Objective After Conference of Gen. Craig and McSwain, House Military Leader.

By the Associated Press.

Decision to drive for funds to give the Nation an air force "second to none" emerged yesterday from a conference between Gen. Malin Craig, Army chief of staff, and Chairman McSwain (Democrat), South Carolina, of the House Military Committee.

McSwain arranged to go before a House appropriations sub-committee today to press for inclusion of money for 800 up-to-the-minute fighting planes in the War Department's appropriation for the next fiscal year.

At a cost of around $70,000,000 annually, including accessories and ground equipment, he said, 800 planes would have to be provided yearly for three years to meet what the War Department considers minimum needs.

The department, with $17,500,000 available, now is preparing to let contracts for a fleet of powerful bombing and pursuit planes. It placed a $2,500,000 order for 100 attack ships on Tuesday.

As these defense preparations went forward, the Senate Munitions Committee was waiting for Secretary Morgenthau to hand it a report on financial aid extended in the United States to Italy and Ethiopia.

Committee spokesmen said the volume of loans and credits probably was not large, but in a belief that similar activities helped pull the country into the last war committee members were ready to ask Congress for a ban on financial assistance to belligerents.

The committee expects to resume hearings early next month, with wartime operations of the Morgan firm under scrutiny.

Craig told reporters an air service surpassed by none in the world meant bringing the Air Corps up at least to the strength recommended by a special aviation board headed by Newton D. Baker—2,320 fighting planes.

Milne Found Tied, Gagged; Gasps Name

Demands of Kidnapers for $25,000 Believed Met by Family.

Youth Missing 5 Days Discovered in Ditch at Doylestown, Pa.

By the Associated Press.

Doylestown, Pa., Dec. 19.—A young man identified by police as Caleb Milne 4th was found early today bound and gagged in a ditch near Doylestown.

The youth was found several hours after his family was reported to have paid $25,000 ransom to kidnapers.

State police said the youth spelled out the name Milne after a gag was removed from his mouth.

The youth was found by three young Doylestown men, Robert Keaner, Max Riskin and Lance Smith.

Police Chief James Welsh, of Doylestown, asserted: "There's no doubt that it's Milne."

Found on Highway.

The youth was found on a heavily traveled highway known as old York road, 7 miles east of Doylestown.

He was rushed to the Doylestown Emergency Hospital. Physicians said he was suffering from exposure and lack of food.

Police said the youth apparently had been held captive since he disappeared five days ago from his New York apartment.

S. R. Gerhart, a Philadelphia salesman, stopped his automobile and carried the youth to the office of Dr. Bradford Greeb, in Buckingham. He then notified State highway patrol.

From the lips of the young man, Dr. Greeb stripped layers of adhesive tape. Gerhart cut the rope by which the man's wrists were bound to his knees.

The physician said that Milne mumbled the name "Caleb Milne" several times on his way to the hospital.

Identified Him.

Highway patrolmen said that judging by tears in his overcoat, the young man apparently was thrown from a moving car.

Chief Welsh later said he identified Milne from photographs. Welsh notified Milne's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Caleb Milne, jr., at their mansion in the Germantown section of Philadelphia and Federal agents in Philadelphia.

Welsh said the young man had no socks and a shoe on only one foot. Both feet were swollen, he said.

Hoover's Office Silent.

The Department of Justice was silent early today concerning the finding near Dolyeston, Pa., of a youth identified as Caleb Milne, missing New Yorker.

J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Bureau of Investigation, was not in his office, nor could he be reached at his home. Other officials said they knew nothing of the finding of the youth.

The "G" men were known to be taking part in the investigation. Officials said earlier in the week that the fact a ransom note was sent through the mails made the offense a Federal one if kidnaping were committed.

Hoare Resigns in Peace Clash; Plan Faces Defeat in League; Eden, Laval Weaken on Stand

Briton Terms Proposal a 'Trial Balloon' to Learn Views.

Failure Admitted; Future Held Dark

Council Meets Today Secretly to Chart New Action.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Geneva, Dec. 18.—An Anglo-French plan to halt the African war lay tonight on the brink of League of Nations burial, shorn of support from the very nations which made it.

No one around the horse-shoe table of the League Council arose today to defend it as a good plan—not even Anthony Eden or Pierre Laval, spokesmen for Great Britain and France.

Ethiopia waved the scheme farewell with undisguised irony. It would have given Benito Mussolini many of the territorial and economic rights he has been trying to take by military might.

Italy's Seat Vacant.

Eden and Premier Laval, however, did emphasize that the best of intentions actuated their nations in formulation of the proposal.

Italy's seat at the Council table was vacant. Whether or not it was an intentional Roman "sanction," it was a fact that Il Duce had boycotted the session.

"The search for a friendly settlement of the conflict is at any moment in conformity with the letter and spirit of the League Covenant," Laval told the council.

Eden, in a statement formally approved by the British cabinet before he left London, described the peace suggestions as a sort of trial balloon "advanced in order to ascertain what the views of the two parties and the League might be."

"His majesty's government recommended them only for this purpose," he added, and he stressed Great Britain would not pursue the plan further if it failed to meet the approval of the League.

Afterward, British circles referred to the plan as an "attempt at conciliation which has failed."

Nobody—Eden, Laval, or any League official—ventured tonight to predict what the next attempt for peace would be like. The Council adjourned without taking any action, to await formal replies from Ethiopia and Italy. It will meet secretly tomorrow morning, however, without the Ethiopians or Italians.

Friday Meeting.

On Friday the Sanctions Committee of 18 probably will meet to discuss the general sanctions situation. Economic sanctions against Italy were 31 days old today, but an important proposed embargo on oil, coal, iron and steel has been held in abeyance.

Wolde Mariam, Ethiopia's spokesman told the Council his country was not replying officially to the peace proposals until the League itself has passed judgement on them. But he did say that Ethiopia "wants a peace with justice and charity; not by capitulation."

Mariam referred sarcastically to the "slight advance" made so far by Mussolini's powerful armies in Africa and asked if it were possible that "an aggressive state could be invited by the League to accept half

Mrs. James B. Clews Married To George Blumenthal, Banker

Mr. and Mrs. George Blumenthal at the Mayflower last night.

George Blumenthal, former head of the New York and Paris banking firm of Lazard Freres, stopped off in Washington last night with his bride, the former Mrs. James Blanchard Clews, widow of the New York financier.

The couple's long heralded marriage took place quietly yesterday afternoon at Mrs. Blumenthal's New York apartment. The ceremony was attended by members of the immediate family. The marriage service was performed at 3 p. m. by the Rev. Henry F. Hammer, of St. Patrick's Cathedral.

Mr. Blumenthal, widely known both in this country and abroad as an art collector, is president of the Metropolitan Museum in New York. He also is head of the Mount Sinai Hospital.

The Blumenthal home at 50 East Seventieth street in New York, where Mr. and Mrs. Blumenthal will live after a brief honeymoon in the South, contains one of the finest private art collections in the country.

Resignation Laid To Split Over Talk

Minister Planned to Defend Proposal in Commons.

Old Diplomacy Fails; Plight of Sir Samuel Hoare—Editorial, See Page 8.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

London, Dec. 18.—British Foreign Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare, co-author of the Hoare-Laval peace plan to settle the Italo-Ethiopian war by giving Italy half of Ethiopia, resigned tonight.

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin accepted the resignation.

It was reported reliably that Sir Samuel resigned because of differences in the cabinet over the speech he is to make in the House of Commons foreign policy debate tomorrow. The resignation surprised even Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, it was said.

Half the cabinet opposed a "fighting defense" of Sir Samuel's conduct in the Italo-Ethiopian peace negotiations, but Hoare insisted he be permitted to attempt a strong defense.

Neville and Austin Chamberlain reportedly wanted Sir Samuel to confess he made a "blunder" at Paris.

League Secretary Anthony Eden's refusal to present the scheme to the League Council today except on a "take it or leave it basis," put the foreign secretary in an embarrassing position despite Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin's assurance that his colleagues had the utmost confidence in him.

Collaborated With Laval.

Sir Samuel collaborated with French Premier Pierre Laval in drafting the proposals ten days ago in Paris. Reportedly the statesmen decided there was danger of Italy's going berserk and spreading war in Europe if League sanctions were permitted to follow their course of gradual intensification.

Sir Samuel was believed to have gained the impression that if the proposed League oil embargo—which since has been postponed—caused Italian military reprisals, the British fleet would have to bear the brunt in the Mediterranean because the French fleet is unprepared.

The excuse which probably will be given for Hoare's resignation—poor health—has a basis in fact for the foreign secretary was under doctor's orders to take a vacation in Switzerland when he stopped in Paris to collaborate with Laval in a last desperate peace effort.

Sir Samuel continued to the Alps, where his nose was broken while skating. He rushed home to face the mounting revolt against the terms of his peace plan, which many felt to be a "betrayal" of League principles.

Eden May Get Post.

His successor as yet is unknown, although young Anthony Eden probably is best fitted by experience to carry on the office.

Shortly before Sir Samuel's resignation became known, it was rumored that Sir Robert Van Sittart, permanent undersecretary for foreign affairs, was considering resigning. He also had an important part in the peace negotiations which were virtually disavowed by Eden at Geneva today. Van Sittart may receive an ambassadorial post if he quits.

Sir Samuel's withdrawal from the cabinet—a rarity in British politics—caused a sensation. The British Broadcasting Company interrupted all its programs to announce it.

Sir Samuel quit on the eve of the biggest international crisis since he took office last June 7, succeeding Sir John Simon.

Tomorrow he was to have gone before the House of Commons to face a promised hammering from critics in all parties. A resolution of censure was ready for voting.

Weakened by months of suffering from arthritis and his nose injury, criticized even by members of his own Conservative Party and let down badly at Geneva by Eden, Hoare apparently felt he had no choice but to resign.

Apparently he made attempts to Reserve Heads Postpone Move On Idle Money

Governors Think Time Not Ripe to Curb Accumulation in Banks.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Governors of the 12 Federal Reserve banks, after deliberating over the problem for two full days, last night adjourned without making any recommendation regarding action to curb the amount of excess bank reserves, except to warn that the problem should have "unremitting study" in order that appropriate action may be taken when necessary.

Joint Statement Text.

Although the Reserve Bank governors, meeting here as the system's open market committee, did not close the door on action to restrict the growth of excess reserves—idle money—within the system, they indicated the situation at this time did not demand action.

These conclusions were revealed in a joint statement last night by the Board of Governors and the open market committee. The two groups conferred most of the day and did not complete their deliberations until after dark.

The following joint statement was issued:

"The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System and the Federal open market committee have given extended consideration to the general business and credit situation and to the recommendation of the Federal Advisory Council and are of the opinion:

"1. That continued improvement has been made in business and financial conditions, but that the country is still short of a full recovery.

"2. That the primary objective of the system at the present time is still to lend its efforts to a furtherance of recovery.

"3. That there is at the present time no evidence of over-expansion

Plan to Replace AAA Is Sought By Republicans

Specialists Named to Map Plank for Convention; Wallace Skeptical.

By Robert C. Albright.

Selection of a group of farm specialists to formulate a workable substitute for the New Deal's AAA, as part of a program to be laid before the Republican national committee in Cleveland June 9, is quietly going forward in G. O. P. circles, it was learned here last night.

Although the movement is in its preliminary stages, Harrison Spangler, of Iowa, director of Republican Western headquarters, before leaving Washington yesterday conceded that such a group is being formed, but declined to comment on its probable membership.

Doubts Effective Move.

Reports that former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, George N. Peek, recently resigned as the President's adviser on international trade, and Dr. John L. Coulter, former member of the Tariff Commission, all will be asked to serve, could not be confirmed.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, formerly associated with some of those identified with the movement, aimed a shaft at the proposal yesterday, but conceded the AAA could be improved upon."

Asserting he "was not one of the political advisers of the Republican Party," he said, nevertheless, that he hoped the group "would get together as good a program as possible."

"But I should think it would be difficult for these gentlemen to get together," he added. "In the old days, they didn't pull together very well."

Meanwhile, the Agriculture Department's crop reporting board released what it called a "bird's-eye view" of farm statistics putting combined income of farmers from production and benefit payments in 1935 at a $8,110,000,000 level, a 12

Board Clears 4 School Books Of Red Charges

Probe Report Submitted; Citizens Not Satisfied, Says Sullivan.

Four public school textbooks, which citizens had called communistic, were upheld yesterday by the report of the special textbook investigating committee of the Board of Education.

A new book was thrown out of the teachers' colleges by order of Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, after a newly appointed professor said it might be "construed as too favorable to communism."

Leaders Not Satisfied.

The Board of Education decided to let the textbook report await the meeting on January 2 for final action, but meanwhile adopted a motion by Vice President Henry J. Gilligan opposing "any future public hearings on the subject of communism." Written communications will be accepted.

Citizens' leaders immediately said they were not satisfied with the textbook report, George E. Sullivan, chairman of the anti-communism committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations, said upon leaving the Board of Education meeting yesterday in the Franklin Building:

"This report doesn't faze us, not in the slightest. We're not satisfied with it. Our committee will meet within a few days to see what

Laval's Cabinet Crisis Averted; Herriot to Stay

State Minister's Threat to Resign Caused Fear of Overthrow.

By the Associated Press.

Paris (Thursday), Dec. 19.—Minister of State Edouard Herriot withdrew his decision early today to resign from the cabinet because of a disagreement with Premier Laval on foreign policies, saving the Laval government from a threatened collapse.

Herriot announced late last night he would resign today and it was reported in Radical Socialist circles he would take this action because he disapproved of Laval's "weak" support of the League of Nations through the Italo-Ethiopian crisis.

Herriot reconsidered his decision to quit the government after he had resigned his leadership of the Radical Socialist Party.

Herriot's announced intention of staying in the cabinet heartened supporters of the Laval government, which had been shaken only a short time before by an announcement of the resignation of Sir Samuel Hoare, the British foregin secretary who helped Laval write the widely maligned Anglo-French plan for African peace.

Herriot's change of mind was announced by Edouard Daladier, leader of the anti-Laval faction party, who with other leaders of the faction had pleaded with Herriot until the early hours of the morning.

Post Toy Fund Will Play Santa To Many Asking Aid First Time

Many in 'White-Collar' Class Never Before Faced Cheerless Christmas, Appeals to Managers of Children's Campaign Now Indicate.

Hundreds of children in Washington are faced for the first time with a barren, cheerless Christmas.

In former years their generous parents helped make the Yuletide merry for many a needy family. But this year they are unable to take care of their own needs. Savings have been used up. Jobs are still scarce. And so their own children are likely to awake next Wednesday morning only to find Santa Claus has passed them by.

But this drab picture will be quite different if The Post Toy Fund meets its goal of $500 by the end of this week. With this amount and with the dolls and playthings that have been given by thoughtful Washingtonians, most of the boys and girls of the destitute among the so-called white-collar class will have at least a semblance of a merry Christmas.

The directors of the fund have investigated individual appeals, so there will be a minimum of duplication with other agencies providing toys.

One of the greatest needs is dolls. Although many have been given, they have already been allotted, with the exception of one, and there are still scores of little girls who will have empty arms on Christmas morning.

The one doll not yet assigned is a proud, blue-eyed, waxen-faced little lady who is serving as mascot of the fund until Christmas Eve. Then she will be taken in all her blonde glory to the Children's Hospital, where she will delight some child who has looked forward to Santa's visit as a brief surcease from pain.

Directors of The Post Toy Fund are hopeful that only new dolls or used one in excellent condition will be brought to headquarters in The Washington Post Building. It is too late now, they pointed out, to mend broken ones or to have soiled ones made clean and shiny.

A great number of toys and clothing are expected at the fund's headquarters Saturday as a result of the special showing on that morning at Loew's Fox Theater of "Treasure Island." Boys and girls will be admitted in exchange for

Bonsal Reveals Unpublished Report by Lawrence of Arabia

Hitherto unpublished facts about the exploits of Col. T. E. Lawrence (Lawrence of Arabia) and his part in the Paris peace conference came to light in Washington yesterday. Stephen Bonsal, diplomatist and war correspondent, released for publication in The Post a memorandum in the handwriting of Lawrence in which he gave his own account of his campaign for the Allies in Arabia.

STEPHEN BONSAL.

The memorandum, a priceless document from one of the most colorful figures of the World War, was given to Mr. Bonsal when he was attached to the American mission to the Paris conference, with Col. E. M. House. This important addition to the historical data of the war since has reposed among Mr. Bonsal's records.

Mr. Bonsal has written his own introduction to the Lawrence letter. He relates conversations with the mystery man of Arabia that throw new light on controversial questions:

How did Lawrence himself appraise his activities among the Arab tribesmen?

Why did Lawrence refuse honors his government sought to give him and retire to the British Air Service, where he remained in obscurity until his death?

Mr. Bonsal's comment includes a colorful description of the presentation of the Arabs' demands at the peace conference and Lawrence's refusal to advise the softening of [illegible] spokesman's disturbing argument.

Lawrence's unpublished memorandum and Mr. Bonsal's accompanying comment will appear exclusively in next Sunday's Washington Post.

Friend 'Saw' Thelma Todd Alive 19 Hrs. After Time Set for Death

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Dec. 18.—The puzzling death of Thelma Todd took on another baffling angle tonight in the report of Mrs. Carmen West, estranged wife of Miss Todd's business partner, that she saw the blonde actress with "a man of dark complexion" nearly a day after she was supposed to have died.

Mrs. West said she was positive in her identification. She said she saw Miss Todd in an automobile at Sunset boulevard and Vine street about 11 p. m. Sunday. The autopsy report indicated Miss Todd died about 4 a. m. Sunday.

A grand jury investigation along "a totally new angle" already has been ordered after a coroner's jury had recommended further inquiry into the death of Miss Todd, found dead in her motor car Monday afternoon.

"I was evasive when I talked to you last night," Mrs. West told police, whom she summoned to her home. "I want to tell everything I know now. I saw Thelma Tood with a man of dark complexion whom I did not recognize about 11 p. m. Sunday."

District Attorney Buron Fitts announced he will question Mrs. West tomorrow on her story.

Mrs. West, known professionally on the screen as Jewel Carmen, said:

"I was returning from San Fernando Valley, and was traveling east on Sunset boulevard when I saw a chocolate-colored phaeton which I immediately recognized as belonging to Miss Todd.

"I hurried my own car and drew as close as possible. Sitting next to the driver was Thelma Todd. I recognized her from a smart hat I knew she wore and also her blonde curls.

"Driving the phaeton was a foreign looking man."

The statement of Mrs. West went

RFC Launches Drive to Slash Interest Rates

Offers to Underbid Banks on Great Northern's $100,000,000 Loan.

By the Associated Press.

The powerful Reconstruction Corporation yesterday threw its resources into President Roosevelt's drive for lower interest rates with a Government offer which, in effect, would underbid railroad bankers.

Chairman Jesse Jones made public a letter in which RFC agreed to take any amount unsold to the public of a $100,000,000 issue of ten-year Great Northern Railway bonds—provided the interest rate is 4 per cent.

He informed W. P. Kenney, president of the railroad, that RFC directors felt the road would be paying "entirely too much for the money" under a proposal of private bankers to underwrite the issue for a fee of approximately $1,000,000 with the interest rate at 5 per cent.

Urged Lower Rates.

At a November press conference, while American Bankers Association met in New Orleans, Mr. Roosevelt said he would like to see interest rates drop below 6 per cent and described easier money as an avenue for utilization of towering excess bank reserves.

At Warm Springs, Ga., the President was quoted by a delegation of farmers as favoring a maximum 3½ per cent rate on farm mortgages.

"We appreciate your efforts and those of your bankers to provide this money without coming to the Government," Jones' letter to Kenney said yesterday, "but feel that in offering to pay such a high rate, you will be hurting all railroad financing, and unnecessarily penalizing your own security holders.

Held Fair Yield.

"Four per cent is a fair yield, a good rate in this market, and we think you should not be required to pay more. We have no desire to supplant your bankers, but would like to co-operate with them and the railroads to the end that railroad financing can be done at much less cost to the roads."

Jones recalled in his letter that in his address to the bankers at New Orleans, he stated that "one way the Government could assist the railroads was to help them get their money cheaper."

"I have repeatedly stated that I am as anxious as anyone to get the Government out of the banking business," he continued. "But I have also stated that it should not get out too soon; by which I mean until money is available from private sources, at fair interest rates and on fair terms."

The Great Northern is not now an RFC borrower. Jones described it as "one of our best systems" which "has never been in receivership."

He said the fact that the proposed 5 per cent bonds were quoted Monday in New York at 108 on a when-issued basis was "the best evidence" that this rate "is entirely out of line."

Wages Before Yule Ordered for WPA

The Works Progress Administration has taken steps, it was learned yesterday to insure every relief worker a check for the money due him before Christmas Eve.

Administrator Harry L. Hopkins made public a telegram sent Monday to all State WPA administrators and field representatives. The message said:

"Important.

"I desire that every regular WPA pay check earned be in the hands of the workers by December 24. The law does not permit advance payments but no efforts should be spared to make delivery of checks due by Christmas Eve. Overtime worked by administrative employes handling pay rolls should be ordered where necessary and courier service should be arranged if necessary to overcome transportation delays caused by congestion in the mails, etc."

Limited Naval Accord By France Is Approved

Paris, Dec. 18 (AP).—The naval committee of the Chamber of Deputies today supported the government's refusal to agree to long-term building programs in any future naval accord.

They approved the policy of Naval Minister Francois Pietri that France can consider only short-term commitments in view of the uncertainty of Germany's building plans. They also agreed that France might express a willingness to accept qualitative limitation (restriction on the number of ships in certain types).

Between You and Me

Silencer May Be Placed On Maj. Berry; Cabal Fights Rex Tugwell; Bilbo's Dream House.

By Raymond Clapper

DISCUSSIONS are going on which look to putting the old NRA out of sight and tucking it away safely under the arm of Secretary of Commerce Roper before Congress comes back.

Specifically, Ernest G. Draper, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, a business man of broad experience (Dromedary dates, most recently), would be made custodian of the remnants.

Specifically, also, a silencer would be put on Maj. George Berry so there would be no more scenes like the one which broke up his recent industrial conference. That show, which ended in a riot, rubbed both business and important Administration quarters the wrong way. It interfered with the breathing spell. In certain Administration quarters it is desired to get everything quieted down before Congress starts a clamor.

One of the few Administration agencies which is on speaking terms with the business world is the Department of Commerce. Business feels that Roper is trying to squelch the brain trusters. It also has confidence in Draper. The program, if approved by the White House, is to cut the NRA force down to 300 or 400 employes, invite business and trade representatives to sit in and help liquidate it, and to give assurance that the ghost of the Blue Eagle won't break loose again and frighten business.

The inside battle over Dr. Rex Tugwell continues. Every few days the rumor is revived that he is going to be sent to Geneva for the duration of the Presidential campaign. Mr. Roosevelt has indicated no such intention. On the contrary, he is reluctant to throw any loyal adviser overboard.

Mainly, critics of Tugwell within the Administration would like to see him pipe down. It is his speeches that cause trouble and revive suspicions that the Presidential breathing spell is only a preliminary to another spell of choking. Efforts have been made to have all speeches by Administration officials vised at the White House. Some officials do this. Others do not.

Mr. Roosevelt has been hesitant to crack down and New Dealers have continued to say what they pleased, any time, anywhere. One of the most faithful officials in the matter of submitting advance manuscript is the Secretary of Agriculture Wallace—and he is one of the frankest speakers in the Administration. Yet he seldom goes off the deep end and rarely provokes an unfavorable kickback.

If you should be drawn into an argument about the Michigan Townsend election—in the Third Congressional District—you can take either side.

On the affirmative, your point is that the Republican candidate, backed by the Townsendites, polled a majority of more than 2 to 1, a far greater margin than has been registered in years in that normally Republican district.

On the negative, your point is that considering the effort made by the Townsendites, the ballyhoo, the 60 or more campaign meetings they held, the flying about of Real Estate Promoter R. E. Clements, who is the real brains for Dr. Townsend, they got out a pitifully small vote. It was only about half what the district has been registering.

*Latest returns.

The Roosevelt-Hoover debate is the first one between a President and a former President since the other Roosevelt carried on a running war-time debate with Woodrow Wilson. It promises to be equally bitter. It was during T. R.'s attack on the Wilson Administration that he coined so many famous political epithets, such as "pussyfooting," "weasel words," "pacifists" and "poltroons."

Hoover's speeches have brightened up considerably since his former publicity genius, Ben Allen, returned to work recently. Already we have from Hoover, "joy riding to bankruptcy," "suicide roads," "rain-maker's cabalistic dance," and "alphabet juggling."

Politics needs a fresh vocabulary. If we are to spend the next ten months hearing about balancing the budget and the Constitution, a few good gags would help keep the audience interested.

To Whom It May Concern:

The Editor of The Washington Post has received from Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, variously known as "The MAN Bilbo," "The Pearl of Pearl River County," "The Old Maestro of the Stump," and "Bilbo the Builder," an announcement mailed from Poplarville, Miss., which reads as follows:

"United States Senator Theodore G. Bilbo announced today that he will open wide the doors of the "Bilbo Dream House"* next Saturday and Sunday, December 21 and 22, and he states that a cordial invitation is extended to not only every friend he has in the State, but also to the public in general.

"The 'Dream House' is situated at the Bilbo Juniper Grove Homestead—five miles east of Poplarville. Refreshments will be served to everyone, such as coffee, cakes, cheese, sardines and crackers. This was the diet the Senator subsisted on when he made that famous and victorious campaign for the United States Senate in 1934. The reception will be from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. both Saturday and Sunday, December 21 and 22.

*Bilbo began work on his "Dream House" during his second term as Governor of Mississippi. Construction was halted for lack of funds. Two years ago a United States marshal seized the incompleted residence when the Senator failed to satisfy a $500 judgment. It was auctioned and Bilbo's son-in-law bought it. Recently, with the aid of his senatorial salary, Bilbo completed his "Dream House."

State Aid Quits Club As Snub to Talmadge

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 18 (AP).—Daniel J. Sullivan, State Administrative auditor, today announced his resignation from the Mid-day Luncheon Club because it invited Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia to speak at a luncheon day program February 11.

Sullivan, a Democrat and political adviser to Gov. Horner, assailed the Southern Democratic leader for his criticism of President Roosevelt.

"When they invite a man whose only claim to greatness is opposition to the President, I'll have nothing to do with it," he said.

Christmas Mass Halted By Drunks and Curious

Houston, Tex., Dec. 18 (AP).—Inebriates and curiosity seekers have caused abandonment of the beautiful Catholic Christmas Eve midnight mass in the Galveston diocese.

"There is too much disturbance at the midnight mass," the Very Rev. George A. Wilheim, dean of the Catholic clergy here, said today.

2 Gunmen Recaptured After Escaping Jail

Newark, N. J., Dec. 18 (U.P.).—Edward Metelski and Paul Semenkewitz, gunmen who escaped from Middlesex County Jail Saturday night, were captured tonight at a restaurant on a busy business corner.

Metelski was standing in front of the restaurant; Semenkewitz was inside eating hamburgers.

Three shots were fired as police closed in on Metelski, but all of them went wild.

Thirty policemen, headed by Capt. James J. Lamb, overpowered Metelski as soon as he fired. They then went into the restaurant and arrested Semenkewitz. They were taken to Newark police headquarters.

Landon Speech In East Sought By G.O.P. Head

Kansan's Friends Question 'Strategy;' Knox Held Gaining in N. Y.

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 18.—Eastern Republicans, it was learned tonight, are bringing strong pressure to bear upon Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas to influence him to make a speaking appearance in the East.

A high Republican source, sympathetic to Gov. Landon as a possible candidate for the next Republican Presidential nomination, said some of Landon's Eastern supporters question the wisdom of Landon's apparent "strategy."

This source said it was presumed to be a strategy of avoiding any appearance of seeking strong Eastern support.

"Gov. Landon may hope the East will come to Kansas, but the way to get it there is to lead it by the nose," he said.

Knox Gains Favor.

It was believed in some quarters Gov. Landon's close advisers feel that it is too early for him to plan any extensive speaking engagements; that the campaign is a long way off and that he would be "firing his shots into the air without effect" if he were to begin speaking this early.

It was also said that, meanwhile, Col. Frank Knox, of Chicago, was gaining in sentiment among some New York Republicans who would be influential in the Cleveland convention. Pro-Landon men admitted there was some inclination toward Col. Knox "at the top" of the New York State Republican organization.

From another source it was pointed out that considerable significance was attached to a luncheon meeting here several weeks ago, attended by Knox, Republican State Chairman Melvin C. Eaton and William Donovan, former candidate for Governor of New York.

Several Bids Offered.

Some interest was also attached to the legal clash at the recent Washington National Committee meeting between Charles Hilles, New York national committmen, and John Hamilton, committeeman from Kansas, and general counsel to the national committee.

The efforts to bring Gov. Landon East have come from several different quarters.

One is the Kansas State Society of New York. Some time ago, it was learned, an emissary flew to Kansas in an effort to persuade the Governor to make his initial Eastern appearance at a Kansas Society dinner, opening his Eastern "campaign" in a fashion similar to former President Hoover's first Eastern appearance this fall before the Ohio Society of New York.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt, jr., some time ago, likewise invited Gov. Landon to appear before the National Republican Club.

Winchell Slugged; 'Nazis,' He Charges

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—Walter Winchell, Broadway columnist, nursed a swollen lip and a ruffled disposition tonight—both given him, he declared, by "a couple of Nazis."

Winchell was leaving a barber shop last night on Seventh avenue at Fifty-third street when, he said, two men came out of a building, one hitting him on the mouth and another on the neck.

They ran, quickly outdistancing Winchell, who returned to the barber shop for repairs.

Winchell ascribed the attack to a recent column he wrote on the conviction of Bruno Richard Hauptmann in the Lindbergh kidnaping case.

"I suspect they were a couple of Nazis," Winchell said. "I've been threatened before for my belief that Hauptmann is guilty and I've received a good many threatening letters."

Germany's Children Collect for the Poor

Berlin, Dec. 18 (AP).—Six million German boys and girls under 13 years old thronged the nation's thoroughfares today, collecting funds for winter relief.

Torchlight parades and bugle calls preceded the opening of the campaign, which will last until Sunday.

slightly the total for this year, $3,598,000,000.

A plan of this kind would involve transfer of considerable sums from a number of relief agencies into more direct relief work, probably the Works Progress Administration. Total relief expenditures for the first five months of the present fiscal year have totaled $1,315,241,838. The unexpended balance in relief funds is in the neighborhood of $3,000,000,000. Anticipating a balance of $1,000,000,000 next July, it would still be possible to spend $2,000,000,000 in the seven-month period beginning with this month.

CCC expenses for the first five months of the current year have been $268,523,447, with a balance of $245,825,000 available. Even with curtailed enrollment it is hardly possible that this balance could last more than seven months.

This fact would necessitate either a new appropriation or a considerable transfer of funds badly needed elsewhere.

Relief Rolls Disturbing.

While the President was wrestling with the budget problem, the national debt quietly climbed to $30,555,791,967, the highest point in history. This was brought about by $962,639,937 in new financing announced some time ago, but just now effective. The current deficit stood at $1,606,711,375, compared with an estimate that it will be $3,281,000,000 at the end of the present fiscal year. The month of December thus far showed the Government operating "in the black," largely because of income tax receipts.

The disturbing element in the relief situation was Hopkins' report on urban relief. It showed that in the 145 cities surveyed, 1,278,612 families were on relief in November, compared with 1,383,708 in October. The most surprising figure was that for New York City, where the WPA program was supposed to have reached its quota in October. It showed 167,740 families still on relief in November, compared with 226,262 in October. Theoretically, when the works program reaches its quota there should be no one on direct relief.

Relief expenses, however, declined much more than the number of persons receiving relief. In the 145 cities, the direct relief cost in November was $32,043,129, compared with $40,472,287 in October, a decline of 20.8 per cent. In the report on number of persons on relief, 27 cities showed increases.

3,500,000 Hired.

"In interpreting the decline between October and November it muts be kept in mind that in most instances persons transferred to the works program continued to get relief until receipt of payment for the first full period of work performed," the statement accompanying the report said. "As a result, most of those assigned to the works program in November, or late in October, received relief during at least a part of November and were, therefore, reported as receiving relief during that month."

The Works Progress Administration reported that it had 3,500,000 persons at work December 1, but officials there have consistently declined to make public a report showing where they are working.

U. S., Honduras Reduce Tariffs In Trade Pact

Agreement Is 8th Signed Under Administration's Commerce Program.

By the Associated Press.

A reciprocal trade agreement providing for mutual tariff concessions was signed yesterday by the United States and Honduras at Tagucigalpa, the eighth pact to be consummated under the Administration's foreign commerce program.

American exports to Honduras for 1934 were estimated at $6,000,000 a drop, the department said, from the $13,000,000 figure of 1929.

Under the treaty, made public here by the State Department, Honduras grants duty reductions on 17 commodities and guarantees not to increase those on 20 others, in addition to maintaining certain other articles on its free list. Embraced in these three concessions are American food products, manufactured goods and automobiles.

The United States allows tariff cuts on a few products, chiefly tropical fruits and fruit preparations, but its principal concession is to keep on its free list primary Honduran exports, including bananas, coffee and cocoa beans. Honduran commodities already duty free are estimated by the State Department to constitute 99 per cent of American purchases in the Central American republic.

Others Signed.

Similar treaties have been signed with Cuba, Haiti, Brazil, Sweden, Belgium, Canada and Colombia.

The Honduran pact reduces duties as follows on these Honduran products:

Balsams, from 10 to 5 per cent ad valorem; pineapples in crates from 50 to 35 cents per crate of 2.45 cubic feet; pineapples in bulk, from 1 1-6 cents to 9-10 cents each; mango and guava pastes and pulps, from 35 to 17½ per cent ad valorem.

Many Rates Lowered.

Present Honduran rates on American products were lowered as follow:

Smoked and canned meat products, by from one-third to one-half of present rates; butter, condensed, evaporated and dried milk by from one-third to two-thirds; canned fruits, vegetables and fish, by from two-thirds to three-fourths! cotton shirts and denim, by from one-third to one-half; some classes of toilet soaps, proprietary medicines and pharmaceuticals, by from one-third to two-thirds; dried fruits by from one-third to three-fourths, and rolled oats, oatmeal and unsweetened crackers by one-half.

Items on which Honduras guaranteed not to increase present tariffs include wheat flour, fancy biscuits and prepared breakfast foods, dried whole milk, fresh fruits, cotton hoseiry, timber, board and planks and hand tools.

3 Slavs Killed in Fight After One Steals Bride

Belgrade, Dec. 18 (AP).—The semi-official news service Pravda said the ancient Moslem custom of bride stealing led today to a savage fight near Tutin, South Yugoslavia, in which three persons were killed and six seriously wounded.

A young girl was snatched by her suitor, the dispatch said, and according to the tradition of the region she belonged to her captor. But a brother with modern ideas organized a rescue party, armed with pistols and axes In a fight for the girl she was injured, Pravda reported. Gendarmes rounded up several score of bruised citizens.

Fumes Fell 50 Women In WPA Sewing Room

Topeka, Kans., Dec. 18 (AP).—Nearly 50 women working on a WPA project in the Crosby Building here were overcome by fumes originating from an undetermined cause today.

Three women were rushed to hospitals, where physicians reported their conditions not serious.

The project, a sewing room employing 200 women, was closed immediately. The fumes may have come, WPA officials said, from paint in the basement.

Husband Finds Wife Dead, Victim of Gas

Mrs. Jessie I. Chase, 54, of 3920 Fourteenth street northwest, was found dead in the gas-filled kitchen of her home late yesterday.

Her body lay across two chairs, and every burner of the stove was open. The body was found by her husband, John Chase, on his return from work. Mrs. Chase had closed the kitchen door.

The Fire Rescue Squad tried to revive the victim, then summoned Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald, who issued a suicide certificate.

Birth Control Is Moral Issue, Says Cardinal

Archbishop Hayes Answers 13 Clergymen Who Criticized Sermon.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 18.—Patrick Cardinal Hayes, Archbishop of New York, in a statement today reaffirmed that the practice of birth control involves the danger of race suicide.

Replying to 13 clergymen who had answered his previous statement on the subject, the cardinal expressed surprise "that a group of professed leaders of religious thought should make the sole test of the desirability of any program or policy a utilitarian one, leaving out of all consideration any question of the moral values involved."

He added: "It is equally surprising that these same religious leaders seem to have set aside belief in the God of revelation, the God of the ages, substituting a vague and elusive God of evolution, and to have relegated Holy Scripture to a land of 'myth and legend.'"

The statement issued on Sunday by the 13 clergymen had protested against Cardinal Hayes' original statement, asserting it was improper for him to attempt to impose upon other Americans the beliefs and practices of the Catholic Church. It added that the cardinal's claim that birth control is contrary to the demand of the Diety "is true, if we mean the God that is found in ancient myth and legend."

The primate said today that "the essence of my Sunday sermon was that contraception is morally wrong, that it contravenes moral law. A careful scrutiny of the rejoinder from the 13 clergymen reveals no slightest recognition even of the existence of such a thing as a moral law.

"This makes the true issue very clear. Fundamentally, it is not a question of advocating or condemning birth prevention, it is a question of the existence or non-existence of an objective code or standard of morality.

Snow and Colder Weather Forecast

Colder weather with light snow or rain was on Washington's weather menu for today.

The snow will swirl about 8 p. m., the Weather Bureau said. The day will be mostly cloudy, the forecaster predicted, and a decided drop in temperature will accompany the snow. Tomorrow is expected to be fair and colder.

Slight flurries were recorded here early yesterday morning, when a minimum temperature of 36 was reported. Yesterday's maximum was 45, recorded at 2:30 p. m.

As District residents prepared for the impending colder weather, the little city of Boaz, Ala., announced that winter officially had arrived.

The reason was Walt Cagle, 550-pound Sand Mountain farmer, came to lay in his supply of winter underwear. His appearance is the official start of the frigid season in those parts.

The Associated Press, in reporting this strange weather phase, said Cagle for 20 years has been the forerunner of Jack Frost—his specifically built size 72 overalls hanging before a store signifying the winter's presence.

Witness to Victim.

Monett, Mo., Dec. 18 (AP).—Bruised and broken in spots, Arno Fritz contemplated tonight the circumstances that changed him from witness to victim in an automobile accident. When two cars collided without injury to any of the occupants, Fritz jumped into the tangle to direct traffic. One driver overlooked the signals. Fritz suffered cuts, bruises and a fractured rib.

Banking Heads Called for Quiz On War Activity

J. P. Morgan Among Those to Get Order From Senate Munitions Probers.

By the United Press.

J. P. Morgan, multi-millionaire financier, and a group of powerful New York bankers will be summoned before the Senate Munitions Committee in connection with new and drastic neutrality legislation soon after hearings are resumed January 7, it was announced yesterday.

Decision to call the bankers was announced by Stephen Raushenbusch, chief committee investigator, after receipt of word from Chairman Gerald P. Nye (Republican), N. Dak., en route to the Capital from the Far East. He is expected to arrive on December 24 and will confer with other committee members on the conduct of the inquiry.

In addition to Morgan, representatives of the Guaranty Trust Co., the National City Bank and Kuhn, Loeb & Co. will be called for questioning, it was announced.

Ostensibly the bankers are to be questioned in order that a full account of intricate financing prior to and during the World War in which Americans participated may be made a part of the committee record. At the same time, the committee will go deeper into connections between the big bankers and the munitions industry.

Vice President Garner Says Fame Bores Him

Chicago, Dec. 18 (AP).—Fame, Vice President John N. Garner observed today, is seriously interfering with his exercise. He was relating how moderate eating, regular sleep and walking kept him in fine fettle. Then this afterthought:

"I can't walk around the Capital very much now. Every time I set out for a stroll, three or four people step up and ask 'aren't you the Vice President?' Of course, I admit it and then we have to shake hands and talk a while."

Garner, en route from the Philippine Islands to Washington, stopped over at Chicago between trains.

Ellington to Broadcast.

As an overture to the big show Saturday morning, Duke Ellington's Orchestra, now at the Fox Theater, last night broadcast a half-hour concert over WRC in behalf of the fund.

This special program was arranged with the co-operation of the Fox Theaters, the Irving Mills Agency, the Musicians Protective Union and WRC. Gordon Hittenmark, WRC's "Timekeeper," was the announcer.

As a result of the musical appeal an additional number of contributions in the form of either dolls or dollars are expected to pour into headquarters at The Post Building today.

Among the letters typical of appeals received yesterday from "the new poor" was the following:

"I am taking the liberty of asking you, if it is at all possible, for you to remember my little girl, 13 years of age. Due to a long illness I have been unable to give her the real necessities of life, not even the proper clothes for school, so there is not the slightest chance for me to get her a single thing for Christmas and she will be terribly disappointed.

"I might add that I am a widow, a registered nurse not able to get work and the cases I did have lately I received no pay for, only promises. It makes me feel so badly to have to ask for help of any sort, but for the little girl's sake, I have pocketed my pride and asked. I do trust you to keep this letter confidential as to my name."

Coal Miners Threaten To Call British Strike

London, Dec. 18 (U.P.).—Britain may be faced with a nation-wide coal strike, mine owners said tonight after a meeting of their executives.

The miners were represented to be "entirely dissatisfied" with a reply to their demands made by the government in the House of Commons tonight. Their delegates will meet tomorrow to discuss strike plans.

Hoffman Avers BooksAreOpen On Hauptmann

Jersey Governor Asserts Belief Case Has Not Been Solved Fully.

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 18.—Gov. Harold C. Hoffman today reiterated his belief Bruno Richard Hauptmann's conviction did not "close the books" of the Lindbergh baby kidnap murder case.

Hauptmann, under sentence to die the week of January 13 in the electric chair, is preparing a petition for clemency to the court of pardons, of which the Governor is a member. The Governor said the court may meet between Christmas and New Year's.

Questioned about his remarks at Allentown, Pa., last night where he was quoted as saying there were "a number of elements of doubt" in the case, Gov. Hoffman said the "doubts" were raised by the defense and other persons and were not necesarily his own.

Case Not Fully Solved.

"You can't quote me," he said, "as saying there is any element of doubt as to Hauptmann's guilt. The courts have passed on that."

Pressed on whether he believed the case had been fully solved, the Governor, who visited Hauptmann in his death cell two months ago, said emphatically:

"In my opinion it has not. No State official is warranted in thinking it has any saying that the book are closed."

In his Allentown conversation, which he said was "no interview," the Governor observed that some of the Lindbergh ransom money had been deposited by an unknown "J. J. Faulkner," that 500 fingerprints had been found on the ladder "and not one of them Hauptmann's," and that there was conflicting testimony over rail 16—the part of the ladder the State contends came from Hauptmann's attic.

Denies Poll Vote "Death."

Gov. Hoffman was uncertain what witnesses, if any, would be heard by the Court of Pardons or whether the court would take cognizance of Hauptmann's request for a "lie detector" test.

The Governor denied as "absolutely untrue" a report that his aids had canvassed members of the Pardons Court and found six members opposed to clemency unless Hauptmann produces new evidence or confesses.

C. Lloyd Fisher, defense attorney, said no plans had been made to submit Hauptmann to a truth test. He said he would agree to it "on condition that if it shows Hauptmann is telling the truth, he should benefit by it."

Airsurance Covers Flying Drummers

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 18.—A new insurance designed to give protection at nominal rates to commercial travelers using airlines was announced today by David C. Beebe, president of the United States Aviation Underwriters, Inc.

Termed "Airsurance," the travel insurance will be issued by six large casualty companies at a cost "comparing favorably" with accident policies for railroad, automobiles or steamship voyages.

"Airsurance" will be an employer's voluntary contractual liability policy under which it will be possible for an employer to obtain up to $10,000 insurance for each employe named in the policy, at a rate of $1 per $1,000 a year.

The minimum premium for any one employer will be $50, covering five or more persons, as he may designate.

Effective January 1, 1936, "Airsurance" will be issued by the Aetna Casualty & Insurance Co., Century Indemnity Co., Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co., Maryland Casualty Co., New Amsterdam Casualty Co., and United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co.

Adamson, Former U. S. Worker, Dies

Samuel Mullineaux Adamson, 61, a resident of Arlington County for more than 25 years, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. George Watt, 2810 North Tenth street, Clarendon, yesterday.

Mr. Adamson was born in Philadelphia and came to Washington as a young man, moving later to Clarendon. He was retired from the Bureau of Engraving and Printing in 1930.

Funeral services will be conducted from the C. J. Ives funeral chapel at Clarendon tonight at 8 o'clock by the Rev. O. S. Sherwood, pastor of the Virginia Avenue Christian Church. Burial will be at his old home in Philadelphia.

He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Watt, and a son, Henry C. Adamson, of Philadelphia.

Ready to Guide Party in House, Bankhead Says

Will Arrive Sunday, He Writes; Byrns, Garner Due Here Today.

Representative William B. Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, whose serious illness forced virtual abdication of his majority leadership duties last session, has informed acting House leaders he will return here Sunday to take over command, it was learned here last night.

A letter from Bankhead to Acting Majority Leader Edward T. Taylor was disclosed coincident with word that Speaker Joseph W. Byrns and Vice President Garner will arrive in Washington today at the head of the Congressional Philippine delegation.

Byrns will confer at once with Taylor and later with Bankhead on the leadership problem, which has caused some concern in House Democratic quarters, it was said.

"It is my present plan to return to Washington on December 22, and immediately upon getting there I will of course get in touch with you," Bankhead wrote Taylor.

"I am very happy to advise you that I feel in really good condition, and by exercising the proper prudence and care feel confident that I can carry on as majority leader. I will, of course, rely upon your constant counsel and advice."

A small corps of sub-leaders, acting under orders from Bankhead and Speaker Byrns, has been proposed as one method of handling the session's business.

Returning today with the Congressional delegation from the Philippines will be Quentin Parades, jr., first Philippine resident commissioner under the commonwealth government. Parades' father was former speaker of the Philippine House.

Townsend Vote Not Significant, Observers Say

Vice Chairman Williams, of G. O. P., Declares for Borah as Nominee.

Conflicting reactions to the election to Congress from Michigan of an advocate of the Townsend old-age pension plan yesterday marked another series of political developments pointed toward 1936.

Most of those willing to comment saw little or no national significance in the victory of Verner W. Main, Republican-Townsendite, over Howard W. Cavanagh, Democrat, in the Third Michigan District.

Meanwhile, Ralph E. Williams, of Oregon, second in command of the Republican national organization, made an almost flat announcement that he would support Senator Borah, of Idaho, for the Presidential nomination.

Williams, vice chairman of the Republican national committee, conferred with Borah and said afterward that the Idahoan has "got a very strong hold on the people of the country."

"Coming from Oregon," Williams said, "I am for an Oregon man first. My next man would be from Idaho, then Kansas, Illinois and Michigan. After that I would return West."

Borah "Sure Winner."

Williams said there would be no favorite-son candidate from Oregon and that Borah would win there over anyone else.

Other happenings that stirred 1936 political debate yesterday included:

A statement by Secretary Wallace that it was "not worth while to give a serious answer" to the AAA substitute proposed by Gov. Eugene Talmadge, of Georgia, New Deal critic, who proposed a crop holiday every seventh year.

Representative O'Connor (Democrat), New York, said he was placing before Chairman Farley, of the Democratic national committee, reports that the Republican national organization was trying to hire Democratic workers to write for the G. O. P. in the coming campaign.

Representative Fish (Republican), New York, said at Chicago that Senator Borah would make a definite announcement within 30 days whether he would be a candidate. Borah, Fish added, could "win the Republican nomination on the first ballot."

Only Start, Hoeppel Says.

Representative Hoeppel (Democrat), California, supporter of the Townsend plan, said the Michigan vote was a "mere shadow" of what the future would bring and predicted that President Roosevelt could not win re-election without support of Townsend followers.

Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, was among several who took the position that Main came from a normally Republican stronghold.

Main, himself, estimated 10,000 of his 24,000 votes came from advocates of the pension plan.

Representative Lea (Democrat), California, thought the Townsend plan had carried some weight in the election, but expressed belief the people of the country eventually would turn it down.

One Republican, Representative Lambertson, of Kansas, said he was "sorry" if Main had been elected only because he supported the pension proposal.

Representative Burdick (Republican), North Dakota, predicted victories for the Townsend movement wherever the issue was raised.

Saying he would place one specific instance of Republican efforts to hire away Democrats for their campaign, Representative O'Connor added he had been informed of three such instances involving men placed in New York NRA headquarters.

"These individuals," said the New Yorker, "are editors and writers of high intelligence and under NRA were supposed to be good Democrats. Yet one of them told me Republican Chairman Fletcher had asked for an appointment to sign him up to write for the G. O. P. and that three men had signed up."

Bayonet Kills Soldier.

Fort Sherman, Canal Zone, Dec. 18 (U.P.).—First Class Private Frank Hill, of the U. S. Army, today accidently fell on his bayonet during regular drill and was killed. His home was in Central Falls, R. I. The body will be sent there to his father, Charles Hill, for burial.

Action Delayed on Reserves

of business activity, or of the use of business credit.

"4. That the present volume of member bank reserves, which have been greatly increased by imports of gold from abroad, continues to be excessive, far beyond the present or prospective requirements of credit for sound business expansion.

Eccles' Stand Supported.

"Therefore, the special problem created by the continuing excess of reserves has had and will continue to have the unremitting study and attention of those charged with the responsibility for credit policy in order that appropriate action may be taken as soon as it appears to be in the public interest."

This statement, for the present at least, placed the full Reserve Board and the governors of the 12 regional banks on record as supporting the personal statement issued a month ago by Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the board of governors. But last night's statement, omitting all reference to stock-market activities, lacked the bullish flavor of the Eccles pronouncement.

The statement further placed the Reserve Board and the bank governors in opposition to the Federal Reserve advisory council—comprising 12 private bankers, one from each district—which had recommended that steps be taken at once to restrict excess reserves.

Some Fear Inflation.

In that action the advisory council reflected the feeling among many bankers and some businessmen who regard the unprecedented level of excess reserves as a potential basis for a dangerous and uncontrollable inflation. All are agreed, however, that no excessive credit expansion has taken place, even in financing stock market activities.

Some of the Reserve bank governors went into their two-day session here believing the Reserve system should increase reserve requirements—the percentage of deposits private banks must keep with reserve banks—to bring excess reserves down to more manageable levels. Excess reserves now total more than $3,300,000,000 and may reach higher levels next month.

A canvass of the situation among themselves and with the experts of the Reserve Board, however, apparently convinced these governors that the present situation did not demand action and that action for precautionary purposes might be interpreted as deflationary and thus retard the course of recovery the country has experienced in recent months.

It appears Eccles prevailed on the bank governors to accept the view, as expressed in their statement, that the "primary objective of the system at the present time is still to lend its efforts to a furtherance of recovery," and they feared to take any step which might possibly stop the forward march of recovery.

The Reserve Board members and the bank governors had before them yesterday a lengthy letter from S. Parker Gilbert to the New York Times, strenuously objecting to any action at this time to restrict excess reserves on the ground that such action might restrict recovery.

Gilbert, former Undersecretary of the Treasury, former agent-general for German reparations and now a partner of J. P. Morgan & Co., argued that there has been "little or no expansion of credit in the past year" and certainly "no problem of injurious credit expansion."

"On the contrary," he asserted, "the country has only recently begun to emerge from extreme deflation and depression, and there are still millions of unemployed and a sub-normal volume of production and business activity.

Overexpansion Denied.

"Recovery has begun, but no one can seriously contend that it has gone far enough to show signs of overextension or overexpansion. Is there not a danger that by taking restrictive measures to check a credit expansion which admittedly does not exist, the Federal Reserve authorities, in seeking to avoid the risk of future inflation, would incur the responsibility of checkng recovery just as it is well begun, of starting a new period of deflation?"

He contended further that "if, as a gesture of authority, restrictive measures are to be adopted when no need for them exists, the system runs the danger of losing its ability to act effectively when the need arises."

Gilbert questioned the wisdom of raising reserve requirements as a credit-control device, anyway, and further contended that a far greater threat of inflation for the country than the excess reserves was the continuing deficits of the Federal Treasury.

Roper Reveals Bill to Revise Ship Subsidies

Proposes U. S. Construct Luxury Super-Liners; Congress to Decide.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Roper, holding that Government construction of super liners of the Bremen-Normandie type is a question for Congress, disclosed yesterday the Commerce Department is working on a new ship subsidy bill.

Shipping Board Bureau officials said that under existing legislation the Federal Government cannot build merchant ships outright, the shipping board act of 1928 providing only for loans to operating companies for new construction.

Roper's comment followed proposals in New York this week that the Government build twin "super luxury liners" costing $50,000,000 each for low-cost transatlantic tourist trade.

"Any such super liners should be considered and authorized by Congress," the Secretary said, but he made known also that the contemplated ship subsidy bill would provide an authority that could handle such construction.

To Go to President.

The proposed legislation, he said, would be submitted to the President.

A maritime authority with broad powers was proposed in a bill at the last session of Congress, but after passing the House died in a Senate committee.

Mr. Roosevelt sent a special message to Congress last March asking for revision of the existing ship subsidy legislation, but the House bill was reported to be without his stamp of complete approval.

Bland Expects Changes.

Chairman Bland (Democrat), of Virginia, of House Merchant Marine Committee, said last night changes in the bill before the Senate committee were expected.

"It would be well for us to carry out our present program—to associate a third (cabin) ship with the present two (the Manhattan and the George Washington)," Roper said.

Contract for such a ship is now before the department with application by the United States Lines for a loan. The ship would cost $11,900,000, base price.

Roper said he also was "very much interested in developing a more expeditious service to Latin America" since "we now are in a very advantageous relationship regarding foreign trade with those countries."

Selassie Gift Goes To Italy's Gold Pot

Naples, Italy, Dec. 18 (AP).—A "wedding ring" given by Emperor Haile Selassie himself today found its way into Italy's gold pots.

Adele Chierchia, a bath attendant at Agnano eight years ago, received the ring from Selassie while he was taking a cure.

He gave her the ring and asked her to use it as her wedding ring when she married.

Adele, who remained a spinster, gave the ring to Italy today.

tions Committee will carry out recommendations of the Baker board, but if the committee does not bring in the necessary funds I propose personally to make an effort to have the appropriation increased.

"Air power is something that must always be ready. It will be resorted to not within 24 hours but within 60 minutes after trouble arises.

"If we've got the air power—thoroughly equipped and efficient—it will virtually guarantee us that trouble will not arise. The mere fact that we've got it will make other powers stay off our toes."

Chairman Parks (Democrat), Arkansas, of the sub-committee handling the Army appropriation, has said it might be possible by trimming other items to set aside funds for 800 new planes next year.

U. S. Labor Act Is Void, Associated Press Says

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—The Associated Press today filed its answer to the complaint of the National Labor Relations Board in the discharge of Morris Watson, a reporter, entering denial of charges in the complaint and challenging the constitutionality of the national labor relations act.

The board's complaint averred the employe was discharged because he joined and assisted the American Newspaper Guild. The answer charged the national labor relations act is void and unconstitutional.

A hearing has been set for January 8.

French Seize 2 Spies In Theft of War Plans

Avignon, France, Dec. 18 (AP).—Police said mobilization plans for France's air forces stationed in the Italian border region were stolen two weeks ago from Lyon Airdrome and were recovered today with the arrest of two alleged spies.

A feverish hunt by detectives of the Surete Nationale resulted in the tracking and arrest of Vincent Riccomagno, 46, and Joseph Tayan, 43, both French, on a charge of spying for "a foreign power."

Authorities spread the alarm for a third accomplice, said to have additional important documents.

Six Policemen Held in Tampa Flogging Death

First-Degree Murder Is Charged as Labor Organizer Dies.

By the Associated Press.

Tampa, Fla., Dec. 18.—Six Tampa policemen were arrested tonight on affidavits signed by Sheriff W. D. Bush in connection with the flogging death of Joseph Shoemaker, a labor organizer.

In the affidavits, the sheriff and detective chief charged the policemen "unlawfully and from a premeditated design to effect the death of" Shoemaker, "did commit an assault upon" him and, "in furtherance of assault, did burn, beat and wound the said Joseph Shoemaker, thereby inflicting divers mortal wounds from which the said Joseph Shoemaker did languish, and on the 9th day of December, 1935, did die."

R. M. Huntley, assistant State attorney, said the warrant charged the men with "first degree murder," which, upon conviction by jury, is punishable by death in the electric chair or life imprisonment.

Those arrested, at the conclusion of a day in which they were questioned behind locked doors, were Police Sergt. C. A. Brown, Patrolmen John P. Bridges, F. W. Switzer and Sam Crosby and special officers C. W. Carlisle and R. L. Chappell.

The policemen had been suspended by Mayor R. E. L. Chancey, who also relieved Police Chief R. G. Tittsworth from duty, at the latter's request, as the grand jury investigated the death.

The men arrested are alleged to have been members of a police raiding party which seized Shoemaker and five others in a private home, without a warrant, for questioning about alleged communistic activities.

Released after a brief time, Shoemaker, E. F. Poulnot and S. D. Rogers were kidnaped by a band of men outside police headquarters and carried away to be flogged, tarred and feathered.

Girl Freed in Slaying; Self-Defense Her Plea

Lucy Simms, colored, 19, charged with second-degree murder, was acquitted yesterday in District Supreme Court.

The girl was accused of shooting Naomi Johnson, 19, July 7, in the course of a quarrel over a "boy friend." She pleaded self-defense.

Zoo Gets $190,920 As Expansion Fund

Definite assurance that building operation expansion in National Zoological Park will be carried out as planned was provided by Secretary Ickes yesterday when he alotted an additional $190,920 in PWA funds. Several months ago $680,000 was allocated.

Construction of a new central heating plant and machine shop, a small mammal house, a pachyderm house, and an addition to the birdhouse in contemplated. But for the deficiency grant it would have been necessary to dispense with the birdhouse addition and the mechanical plant, said Zoo Director William M. Mann.

Bids on all four contracts have been received and work is expected to start soon.

Company Raises Bid to Mathews

By the Associated Press.

The General Telephone Service Corporation, of New York, was reported yesterday to have raised by a $10,000 a year its original salary offer to George C. Mathews to join the company as president.

Mathews, a member of the Securities Commission, recently admitted to newspaper men the possibility he might resign to enter private business.

Friends of Mathews said today the company had declined to move its offices to Madison, Wis., one of the conditions Mathews was said to have stipulated in his negotiations, but had agreed to pay him $35,000 a year instead of $25,000. Mathews formerly lived in Madison, where he served as chief examiner for the Public Service Commission.

Ziegfeld Beauty Falls 12 Floors After Gay Party

Police Investigate Death of Olga Steck; Her Former Husband Is Held.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Dec. 18.—Olga Steck, former Broadway stage beauty, plunged 12 stories to her death today after a gay party and her former husband told police he was convinced she jumped from his hotel window.

"I can't explain what happened, but I feel sure she jumped from the window," declared Thomas L. Matkins, 50, from whom the 38-year-old woman was divorced 17 years ago.

Matkins, father of the one-time Ziegfeld beauty's two sons, appeared at police headquarters several hours after Miss Steck's crushed body was discovered in a hotel light well. Her satin slipper lay on her chest.

A few hours before her death, Everett F. Saxe, a liquor salesman, who said Miss Steck was his wife, was treated at an emergency hospital for head wounds. He said she struck him with her slipper.

Captain of Inspectors Charles Dullea, who said the tragic plunge followed a night club drinking party, reported fingerprints on the window sill indicated Miss Steck attempted to save herself.

"I heard a swish behind me as I was packing my bag," Matkins told Inspector Allen McGinn. "I thought Olga had gone into a closet for her coat, or out the door."

McGinn quoted Matkins as saying that when he discovered his former wife was no longer in the room he went downstairs to look for her.

He said he learned of Miss Steck's death on reading a newspaper.

Killed in Plunge

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

OLGA STECK, former New York showgirl, who was killed yesterday in a 12-story plunge from a hotel window in San Francisco. An investigation is under way.

Matkins, a bond salesman, left the hotel about five minutes after the hotel clerk heard Miss Steck's body fall in the light well, according to Dullea.

"Olga was being nice to Matkins," Saxe told police, "because she wanted to have her boys with her for Christmas and he had custody of them." The sons, Thomas, jr., 19, and Robert, 18, are students at a private school in the Santa Cruz mountains, south of here.

Saxe was quoted by police as saying Miss Steck struck him with her slipper in front of a night club, where she was an entertainer, because he refused to join the party with Matkins.

5th Governor Out in Mexico Internal Crisis

Cardenas Extends Control; Deputies Ask Calles to Leave Country.

By the Associated Press.

Nogales, Sonora, Dec. 18.—President Lazaro Cardenas was reported to have ousted a fifth Mexican governor and to have spread quasi-military control over a wide area tonight in his determination to prevent a possible rallying of forces behind former President Plutarco Elias Calles.

The McAllen (Tex.) Monitor said border sources reported Eleuterio Parra, governor of Nayarit, had been ousted.

He was the fifth governor removed since Calles' recent return precipitated a break between the Socialistic government and Conservatives.

Mexico City dispatches said the federal chamber of deputies had appealed to Calles to leave the country "because his presence is a motive for unrest and disorders." Several deputies accused him of plotting a Fascist revolt.

Officials of labor unions throughout the republic told President Cardenas a general strike would be launched December 31 unless Calles leaves.

The Nogales Herald said yesterday Gov. Ramon Ramos of Sonora had been removed. Similarly, Gov. Manuel Paez of Sinaloa, Gov. Carlos Real of Durango and Gov. Manuel Yanez Maya of Guanjuato found Senate action had taken their legal powers.

While the newly appointed Gov. of Sonora, Gen. Jesus Gutierrez, sped to the national capital by airplane yesterday, federal troops took quiet possession of municipal affairs in his state and presumably in others.

Japan to Reject British Naval Plan

By the Associated Press.

London, Dec. 18.—Japanese delegates to the Five Power Naval Conference tonight were reported to be ready to reject Great Britain's plan for a naval agreement.

The British, suggesting that discussion of eventual fleet equality be dropped at the present conference, want public announcement by each naval power of its building program over a period of about six years.

American and French delegates reviewed the situation in a general discussion today, but apparently reached no conclusions.

As a result of private talks between the American and Italian delegates, it was reported the conference sessions would be recessed after Saturday until January 5, instead of January 2. It was believed the Italians desired to return to Rome for possible consultation with Premier Mussolini.

G. O. P. Seeks AAA Substitute per cent increase over last year's $7,266,000,000 value.

Noting the $844,000,000 increase in gross farm income, Wallace at his weekly press conference said the gain was in face of reduced AAA benefit payments. Government counsel, arguing AAA validity before the Supreme Court, have maintained that of increases in farm income in 1935 and 1934 over 1932, "more than two-thirds was due to the improved market position and less than one-third to direct cash payments as such."

Wallace is making no comment on the Administration's own revised farm plans pending Supreme Court decision on the constitutionality of processing taxes. Whether the AAA emerges intact from the high court crucible, the Administration will make much of farm income increases in the coming campaign. Republicans, while making no effort to soft pedal the figures, will contend that AAA alone has barred even greater increases.

Substitute Plan Old.

Wallace has at least two alternatives for the processing tax in mind, depending on the tack taken by the Supreme Court in its AAA ruling. Some AAA officials are betting even money that the tax will not be entirely invalidated.

Republican efforts to find a satisfactory substitute for AAA to embody in their 1936 platform antedate the meeting of the national Republican committee in Washington early this week, but have been definitely intensified since then.

Spangler declined to say whether Gov. Landon has been approached in connection with the plan, but suggested he was "friendly." Both Peek and Dr. Coulter said they had not been approached.

Farm management objectives of the AAA are nothing new to Lowden, but the former Illinois Governor, a practical farmer, is said to feel AAA is inadequate through failing to provide for proper rotation of crops and long-time benefits to agriculture.

Commenting on the reported Republican farm platform movement, Dr. Coulter said last night he thought it was going forward "very, very informally, and very, very vaguely at present."

"Of course, there must a plank, and naturally some efforts are being made in that direction," he said. "But I have not been approached, and I do not know that I could be of any service if I were."

Suggested Substitutes.

One report is that strong Eastern support is being solicited in the Republican farm movement.

The following has been suggested as a possible combination of the views of some said to be associated with the movement: Retirement of submarginal acreage as a rough means of production management; domestic farm prices guaranteed by an outright subsidy; opening of foreign markets to the domestic farm surplus by direct trading with other nations; stimulation of scientific practices, but no direct production control.

Secretary Wallace said yesterday he did not believe it "worthwhile to give a serious answer" to the Biblical farm program of a crop holiday every seven years, put forward by Gov. Eugene Talmadge, of Georgia.

The Agriculture Department's crop report yesterday covered some 79 crops. Prices were said to range 13 per cent below last year, but this year's heavier production pushed total income to the 12 per cent higher level. Wallace said the estimated $114,000,000 decrease in AAA benefit payments this year was largely due to cuts in corn-hog benefit checks.

Czechoslovakia Elevates Benes To Presidency

Masaryk Successor Sworn in After Assembly Votes 340 to 24.

By the Associated Press.

Praha, Czechoslovakia, Dec. 18.—Czechoslovakia elevated to its Presidency today Eduard Benes, brilliant diplomat and disciple of Dr. Thomas G. Masaryk, who resigned Saturday because of his advanced age.

Benes, the only foreign minister the republic has had since its establishment following the World War, was elected the nation's second President by the National Assembly.

The choice was overwhelming. The 50-year-old foreign minister receved 340 votes to 24 for Prof. Bohumil Nemec, candidate of the Czech Agrarian Party, who had withdrawn yesterday from the race.

Benes was opposed by the German Sudeten Party, Fascists and Right Radicals, who cast 76 blank ballots.

Planes Drop Flowers.

While airplane squadrons circled overhead dropping flowers on cheering throngs, Benes took the oath of office in the assembly hall of Hradschin Castle. Then, after receiving the congratulations of the Diplomatic Corps, he went to see Dr. Masaryk at Lana Palace.

Premier Milan Hodza and his cabinet were expected to tender their resignations to Benes, but it was believed he would not accept the withdrawals. Hodza probably will be given the portfolio of foreign affairs.

Observers expect the government to be reconstructed in January and a new foreign minister selected.

Benes is a devoted protege of Dr. Masaryk, with whom he labored dangerously during the world war for the establishment of Czechoslovakia.

Brilliant Career.

One of the most widely known figures in the halls of the League of Nations, Benes has behind him a brilliant diplomatic career. One of his ablest strokes was the creation of the Little Entente, whereby Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Rumania stand together in central Europe. He also achieved an alliance with France.

Benes several times was president of the League Assembly at its September session. He is a member of the World Court of Justice.

The new president is fond of football and tennis, does not smoke, reads widely and is found of opera.

Visitors are amazed at his wide range in literature. He reads books in German, French, Russian and Czech, along with English.

Friends describe Mme. Benes as a woman of great culture and charm, who has played a large part in Benes' rise.

She testified that Hall killed the six persons March 28, 1934, during a robbery in which she was an unwilling assistant.

Things to Worry About: $27,500 Dog Missing

Chicago, Dec. 18 (U.P.).—The two richest dogs in this town were causing their guardians considerable worry tonight. Red, shepherd-setter who has a $27,500 fortune, is missing, believed kidnaped. Pet, a white spitz dog whose mistress left him $25,000, was in a dog hospital undergoing treatment for a cold.

Hoare Quits

quit yesterday, but Prime Minister Baldwin, Eden, Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain and others called at his residence and assured him the government felt his withdrawal entirely unnecessary.

When even his collaborator, Laval, took only a passive attitude toward the peace plan at Geneva today, Sir Samuel's position became untenable.

Resolution Changed.

As result of Sir Samuel's resignation, Lord Winterton announced amendment of tomorrow's Laborite resolution, changing it to read:

"This House, holding any terms for settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian dispute should be such as the League can accept, assures His Majesty's government of full support in pursuing the foreign policy outlined in the government manifesto and indorsed by the country in the recent general election."

The amendment is inspired by the government and the resolution, as altered, will have full support of the 247 Baldwin majority.

It was understood Sir Samuel would attend Commons tomorrow in his capacity as private member and would make a statement of his personal position.

Parliamentary circles were excited by Sir Samuel's resignation. Members generally appeared convinced the cabinet split on the Paris peace plan caused the withdrawal.

The government was reported considering whether to publish the Hoare-Baldwin correspondence regarding resignation.

Besides Eden, Neville Chamberlain and former Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon were mentioned as possible successors to Sir Samuel. Eden was considered the best prospect. At 38, he would be one of the youngest men ever entrusted with this important post. However, his background as traveling diplomat in some of the most important negotiations of the past year has fitted him to carry on in the present crisis.

Hoare declined to make any statement prior to his appearance in Parliament tomorrow.

British Seen Firm.

Geneva, Switzerland, Dec. 18 (AP). League of Nations circles, astonished by the sudden resignation of Sir Samuel Hoare, the British foreign secretary, believed tonight it meant Great Britain is determined to pursue a foreign policy based on the League.

Some delegates predicted the retirement of Sir Samuel would mean that Great Britain now will seek a settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian conflict more in harmony with League principles than was the Anglo-French peace plan which the foreign minister helped to write.

This plan virtually had perished a few hours before the announcement of Hoare's resignation.

Italian Council Fails to Agree On Peace Offer

New Meeting on Saturday; Il Duce Again Assails 'Crooked Europe.'

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Rome, Dec. 19 (Thursday).—Benito Mussolini's all-powerful grand Fascist council ended more than three hours of discussion of the Anglo-French peace terms early today without announcing its judgment.

Il Duce called another meeting of the council for 10 p. m. Saturday.

After that meeting, he may announce whether Italy will discuss the peace terms or reject them and try to solve her own problems without the help of the League and its powers.

Brief Communique Issued.

A brief communique, issued after the session which ended shortly before 2 a. m. today, said the council had "examined the political situation with regard to the Franco-British proposals."

These proposals, virtually buried before the League of Nations Council at Geneva today, would give Italy much of the territory she seeks in Ethiopia by conquest.

They were followed by a storm of disapproval in "sanctionist" nations and led up tonight to the resignation of Sir Samuel Hoare, the British foreign secretary who was their co-author.

This morning's communique said: "Il Duce interpreted his sentiments to the grand council of Fascism and addressed a salute to Emilio de Bono, marshal of Italy, whose name has been linked with the reconquering of Aduwa and Makale.

"The grand council then examined the political situation in regard to the Franco-British proposals."

Cheered by Patriots.

Among the 11 members of the council who spoke were de Bono and Count Costanzo Ciano, father of Mussolini's fighting son-in-law.

Before the council met amid the cheers of hundreds of Fascist patriots in the brightly-lighted palazzo, Italy's rulers, royal and dictatorial, had proclaimed Wednesday a day of "victory" and "faith."

Queen Elena, tall and garbed in black, implored Divine aid "for triumphs for Roman civilization in Africa." With her court she opened a nation-wide offering of wedding rings before the tomb of the unknown Soldier.

Mussolini, standing among his peasants at Pontinia, cried:

"We will fight" against "crooked Europe."

He called this a "day of Italian faith in their rights—a day of strong, inflexible faith in the destiny of the fatherland."

These events, on the thirty-first day of punishng League of Nations Sanctions because Italy has been deemed an aggressor, against Ethiopia, took place under grey skies or in a setting of rain.

Gold Offers Pour In.

Sombre and obviously tired, Il Duce dedicated his synthetic city, the third to be reclaimed from the Pontine marshes, and received about a bushel of peasant gold in helmets.

Mussolini's wife, Donna Rachele Mussolini, marched at the head of her women neighbors and followed the Queen in casting the rings of her husband and herself into an urn.

Long after dark, thousands of women stood in line here and in other large cities, waiting to offer their wedding bands.

In all, some 8,000,000 women and 2,000,000 Italian men who also wear wedding rings were estimated roughly to have given up 1,000,000,000 lire, or $180,000,000 in gold to the cause.

Mussolini's speech was interpreted by a spokesman as meaning Italy would refuse any "incomplete settlement" of the war.

Standing amid booted and spured Blackshirt guards, he told the ring-giving peasants of Pontinia:

"Forty million people will not allow themselves to be mystified or bluffed. The regime will march straight on * * *"

Coroner's Jury Frees Driver of Death Car

A coroner's jury acquitted Samuel R. Frantom, 27, of 1305 Tenth street northwest, yesterday after an inquest into the traffic death of George Ofenstein, 73, of 213 B street northeast, a retired blacksmith.

Frantom was released when witnesses testified Ofenstein stepped from the curb at Second street and Massachusetts avenue northeast into the path of Frantom's car September 7. Ofenstein died Monday in Garfield Hospital.

French Cabinet Saved

some sources for Herriot's decision earlier to quit the cabinet was that he felt Laval was "flirting" with Germany and that he feared a projected alliance with Soviet Russia would be pushed aside by the premier, at the behest of the Rightists.

A party delegation asked Herriot to reconsider his resignation of the presidency of the party, but he insisted that he was "through."

Leftist elements immediately called upon Laval to resign in turn as equally guilty with Sir Samuel Hoare, who quit as British foreign secretary today, of "sabotaging" the League Covenant.

Laval was expected to urge Herriot to remain in the cabinet, partly because of a widely expressed belief that any cabinet crisis would weaken the franc.

Herriot resigned as president of his party after members of the executive committee had accused Laval of "horse trading" in the Italo-Ethiopian negotiations.

The Radical Socialist leader said he could not accept such words.

"Certain words were spoken here tonight which have shown me that I lack your support," Herriot was quoted as telling the committeemen.

"Remain as president of the party and resign from the government!" the members shouted.

"No; I have had enough," Herriot replied.

Later he was quoted as telling friends he "can no longer uphold the government with a clear conscience."

Pleaded for Faith.

Previously Herriot had pleded for France's "faith" in Great Britain and in the League in the present international crisis.

A party conflict, with Edouard Daladier leading the opposition left wing faction, was regarded in some quarters, however, as a convenient excuse for Herriot to step out of the cabinet.

He was understood to have felt his position as minister untenable because 78 members of his group voted against Premier Laval in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday, with only 45 voting confidence in the premier on his Italo-Ethiopian policies.

Herriot's decision to quit the government also was partly attributed in political circles to the fact that Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia referred to him, instead of to Laval, in a note to the League.

This was unfavorably received by the foreign office, and was understood to have embarrassed Herriot.

The Hoare resignation immediately brought demands from leftist elements that Laval resign as equally guilty of "sabotaging" the League Covenant.

Sir Samuel and Laval collaborated in writing the peace plan.

Herriot had supported Laval's domestic policies, but publicly disagreed with the premier's conduct of Italo-Ethiopian peace negotiations.

The Radical-Socialists have been split in half, for and against Laval, since the premier took office.

Parliamentary observers admitted that Laval will have a hard time defending his own right to remain in office, following upon what was considered the virtual repudiation of Hoare by the British cabinet.

Yesterday's vote of confidence in the Chamber of Deputies gave Laval a majority of 52 votes, the smallest since he took office. It was believed with the peace plan issue clear cut, more Radical-Socialists may join the government's opponents.

Debate Scheduled.

A full-dress debate on the premier's foreign policies is scheduled in the chamber for December 27, but there was a possibility Laval would seek to extricate himself from an embarrassing position at an earlier date.

A tendency toward letting the Italians and Ethiopians fight out their war on the battlefield was spreading in French official quarters tonight, informed circles said.

Ethiopians Cut Italian Retreat In Fierce Battle

3,000 Selassie Warriors Penetrate Lines; Main Offensive Near.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Asmara, Eritrea, Dec. 18.—Thirty thousand Ethiopian warriors commanded by Ras Imeru, who forced Italian troops to retire along the Takkaze River front, have been surrounded and are in danger of annihilation, Italian officials announced tonight.

Italian outposts, numerically inferior to the Ethiopian force, fell back to Dembe Guina Pass after a savage Ethiopian attack had been halted by tanks and machine-gun volleys in a three-day battle.

(Rome claimed an Italian victory with more than 500 Ethiopians and about 300 Italians killed.)

"Few of the Ethiopians" who drove through the Italian lines at Dembe Guina Pass will escape the Italians, officers asserted, saying that if they resist they will be wiped out almost to a man.

The officers spared no adjectives in describing the "mad courage of the Ethiopians" who drove the Italian outposts back, but said the engagement gave the Italians the opportunity they "have been looking for"—to fight a battle face to face with the enemy.

During the prolonged battle, hand-to-hand fighting with knives, curved swords and bayonets raged as the Ethiopians attacked at a steeply banked ford.

Then Italian outposts, stationed on high ridges, poured a withering machine gun and rifle fire on the attackers and the Ethiopians, charging blindly, were met by tanks crashing down into the valley, their guns spitting death.

Seeking to retreat, the tribesmen were stopped by hastily summoned warplanes.

The Ethiopians fought so desperately, using every rock and tree for shelter, that numerically inferior Fascist outposts were ordered back to Dembe Guina Pass.

Italian officers estimated the Ethiopian forces to number 30,000, and said they were commanded by Ras Imeru. His objective, the Italians believed, was the Holy City of Aksum.

Imeru approached the Italian lines along an ancient caravan route from Ataba, and the main battle lasted for hours.

The Ras is a cousin of Emperor Haile Selassie, Governor of Gojjam Province and one of the Negus' most trusted generals.

800 Die in Battle.

Rome, Dec. 18 (AP).—Final victory at the end of three days of fierce fighting along Ethiopia's Takkaze River front was claimed by Italy tonight. More than 500 Ethiopians and 272 Italians perished, officials said.

Marshal Pietro Badoglio, the new Italian commander in chief, reported his troops beat off an Ethiopian flanking attack at Dembe Guina pass "after a violent combat with swords and bayonets."

Then Italian warplanes rained bombs on an enemy column below Makale, south and east of the scene of battle, Badoglio wirelessed.

Scores of wounded Italian officers and men, casualties of the Takkaze conflict, poured into the new hospital base at Aduwa, said dispatches from the front.

For many hours the battle, which began Sunday, was in doubt. The fighting raged about the villages of Mai Timchet and Dembe Guina, south of Aksum. Italian officers believed it was directed at recapture of the Holy City which, under Franco-British peace terms, would be returned to Emperor Haile Selassie.

Ethiopian fire was reported concentrated on Italian officers, and Badoglio said seven were killed and two wounded. The Italian casualties were 20 noncommissioned officers and national soldiers, 48 Eritreans and 197 Askaris, killed; two national soldiers and 25 Askaris, wounded.

Continued submissions of Ethiopian sub-chiftains in the area east of Makale, at Azbi, also was reported by the Fascist high commander.

Peace Plan Faces Doom

the territory of a state which is the victim of aggression?"

Ethiopia was not consulted during the formulation of the Anglo-French plan, it contended. Mariam added his nation always was prepared to accept the League's own peace project, which Mussolini rejected months ago.

"Inspired by League."

Both Eden and Laval reminded the delegates that the peace plan was inspired by encouragement at Geneva.

"It always has been in the minds of the two governments the essential condition that before finally pressing any terms of settlement upon the parties concerned, those terms should be approved by the League," Eden said.

"Indeed, though it may well be maintained that it has been proved at the present juncture of events an almost impossible task, it was proper that an attempt should be made, however invidious the task to those who had to make it.

"For that I make no apology.

"Even if this attempt is to be unsuccessful, the essential importance of conciliation remains, as the League frequently has recognized.

"The principle, therefore, was right, even if its application in this instance may not have been availing."

Premier Laval urged that if the Anglo-French plan fails of the approval of "all interested parties," the League Council allow no further chance to escape "for settling in an honorable and just manner the present conflict."

In its morning session, the Council approved a plan to transfer 25,000 Assyrians from Iraq (Persia) to their homeland. A board of trustees was named to supervise the move.

The Lesson From Michigan.

Comparative figures indicate that the decisive victory of Verner W. Main, Republican candidate for Congress in the Third Michigan District, is due as much to the waning popularity of the New Deal as to his advocacy of the Townsend Plan. But even so, Senator Vandenberg, who supported Mr. Main as a regular party candidate despite his own opposition to Townsendism, is stating an obvious truism in saying that the time is at hand when the Townsend issue "must be separated from other issues and met on its own merits or lack of them."

Whenever candidates for office are weak enough or venal enough to advocate impossibilities in the hope of attracting the votes of an organized minority, the adherents of the Townsend Plan are in a position to exert an influence upon elections out of all relation to their numerical importance. They have demonstrated their strength in Michigan, and if they follow the tactics pursued by veterans' organizations in their endeavors to raid the Treasury they may succeed in building up a formidable Congressional bloc pledged to support demands exceedingly menacing to the national welfare.

The surest way to forestall efforts of the Townsendites to stampede candidates for office into espousing their cause is to force the voters to discuss the issue and decide it squarely upon its merits, in which direction Senator Vandenberg and others are giving a good lead. If more outstanding political leaders have the courage to expose the economic fallacies and absurdities underlying the Townsend Plan, the public can be counted upon to relegate this fantastic proposal to the limbo in which repose many other similar Utopian schemes of short cuts to the more abundant life.

The staggering cost of a pension of $200 per month to all persons who have reached 60 years of age precludes serious consideration of the plan by reasonable people. The 2 per cent turnover tax which it is proposed to levy to finance these payments would raise the cost of living unbearably for all people not in receipt of pensions. Moreover, such a ruinous scheme would ultimately destroy its supposed beneficiaries. Apart from the patent economic defects of the plan, the administrative problems created by such a gigantic subsidization scheme, coupled with enforced spending of pensions within a 30-day period, would be insoluble.

No man who is willing to play upon human credulity by advocacy of such a fantasy should be permitted to slip into office because he wears a regular party label. Such a candidate should be forced to declare himself for the new party that Dr. Townsend and his followers propose to organize. Segregation would effectually dispose of the menace to national stability which will threaten so long as the Townsendites or similar groups are in a position to influence the selection of regular candidates for Congressional office.

Erasmus Said It.

At last the hullabaloo about communism in Washington schools has been effectively exploded. A competent and impartial committee has examined the textbooks from which history and political science are taught without finding anything in any way insidious. They emphatically report that "the textbooks specifically criticized and used at the present time in our schools do not teach or advocate communism."

When this finding is coupled with the specific statement of every teacher in the local school system that no communism is being taught, the entire "red" scare is proved beyond question to be much ado about nothing. The Board of Education has given the witch burners more than adequate opportunity to prove the case they never had. Now, it is to be hoped that this incipient Fascist movement will quickly and permanently subside.

One book by Harold Rugg, formerly used for special classes in industrial history, is considered unduly favorable to communism. The committee points out that this book is not in use at the present time. In view of the Board of Education's conscientious effort to confine the curriculum to unbiased presentation of historical fact, this volume will doubtless not be recommended again. Knowing the sweetness of forbidden fruit, however, the board would be very ill-advised to put any ban upon it.

With this silly rumpus so conclusively terminated, so far as the schools are concerned, only one more step is needed—complete elimination of the mischief-making rider to the last District appropriation bill through which the "red" scare originated. In retrospect, this hubbub may not prove to be completely detrimental. No doubt some overzealous citizens, trying to substantiate their reckless charges against the school system, have examined Prof. Becker's unfairly maligned book of modern history.

If so, they may have perused the tribute to Erasmus, and his comment on the follies of ecclesiastics, now forgotten, "who thought that truth and virtue could be maintained by burning heretics and suppressing heretical books."

The Old Diplomacy Fails.

Sir Samuel Hoare has taken the dignified and indeed the only possible course in resigning as Foreign Minister of Great Britain.

He has undoubtedly received an undue share of personal blame for the much-denounced Anglo-French peace "proposals." As is now known, these were never designed as anything more than a basis for negotiation with Mussolini, and would have received no publicity except for an unexplained "leak" in the French foreign office. Nevertheless somebody had to be the goat for this very unsavory piece of secret diplomacy and Sir Samuel has been victimized by his people for something which properly seemed to them not far removed from double dealing.

The most notable aspect of the whole episode, of course, is its illustration of the power of the improved technique in international relations which the League of Nations was designed to forward. A century ago a private deal between the French and British foreign offices would have decided any European issue, regardless of the attitude of the lesser European powers. Today we see the truly epic spectacle of a French Premier barely sustained, and a British Foreign Minister forced from office, merely because they endeavored to put narrow national advantage ahead of the principles of the League Covenant. It is indeed an extraordinary illustration of the vitality of the new order which is struggling to take form amid the chaos of international politics.

As a result of yesterday's action at Geneva, plus Hoare's resignation in advance of today's debate in the House of Commons, the Anglo-French proposals are now as dead as mutton. Regardless of any statement on the subject from Rome, Mussolini's attitude to the terms has become academic. The only uncertainty in the matter is the extent to which the policy of sanctions has been affected by this astonishing interlude.

That problem Geneva must now immediately confront, with assurance that the sense of collective responsibility for restraint of the aggressor state has been sharpened by repudiation of the effort to undermine that policy. And the effect of the outcome on the Italians, who can now no longer reasonably concentrate their resentments on Great Britain as the villain in the piece, is not the least significant aspect of the present situation.

Unable to make military progress, forced to the defensive by sharp Ethiopian attacks, deprived of further hope of a profitable negotiated peace and facing growing privations and distress at home, the position of Italy begins to grow desperate. The Fascist symbol of unity—the bundle of sticks which are collectively unbreakable—is seen in the balance against an international unity to resist aggression, the strength of which Sir Samuel's resignation indicates.

Memo For Christmas.

There is something a little pathetic, and more than a little futile, about the "how books" which continue to clutter up the stands and form a sort of tailpiece to reviewers' columns. With apparently no limit to their subject matter, the titles range from "How To Make A Gold Fish Contented" to "How To Keep Ivy In Its Place." For this type of innocuous instruction we hold no brief. Nor does it seem sufficiently important to occasion anything more than a skeptical sniff at those optimists who sit down with guide in hand and expect to reap a more abundant life after ten easy lessons.

But there is one type of instructions which seems particularly insidious and we can think of no better time than the holiday season to pay our disrespects to it. Briefly, it is those articles appearing all too regularly in magazines and newspapers on "How To Set A Table For Christmas Dinner." A bit of such "homely" advice states blandly that Christmas dinner has become sophisticated, "featuring perhaps a bare table, or the latest in cloths of transparent film."

As a matter of fact, any self-respecting table practically sets itself for this occasion! First, the extra leaves must be inserted and then cloth, snowy white and family size, is spread. Next the silverware is laid out in gleaming array and the two tall candlesticks, that have reflected the same happy faces year after year, are set at each end. Between them, perhaps, is a poinsettia or a miniature tree. But they must be fairly small so that Uncle Elmer can look straight across at Aunt Kate and not be obliged to peer at her through leaves and branches. The children's plates are always placed on each side of mother so that she can keep an eye on them. With the simple addition of food and family, it's all set.

It's as simple as can be and there is no sense at all in turning it into an interior decoration problem. If we must be educated in Yuletide etiquette, we wish someone would publish a really useful booklet on "How To Look Pleased Upon Receiving A Hand-Painted Necktie."

The District Boundary.

In a letter from James E. Cassidy, printed on this page, The Post is taken to task for criticizing the report of the District-Virginia Boundary Commission. Mr. Cassidy makes a plea for presentation of the unvarnished facts in which we heartily join. Indeed, the chief reason why The Post took issue with the commission's findings is because they seem to have overlooked a number of fundamental facts.

Mr. Cassidy indicates that since the Government has acquired most of the property on the south shore of the Potomac opposite Washington, only a small section there could be inharmoniously developed by private interests. This seems utterly to demolish the "conveniency" theory on which Chairman Brough said the commission acted. If this property already belongs to the Government and is held for the specific purpose of protecting the Capital City from unsightly industrial plants, what is the purpose of separating it from the District by a "line of convenience?" The only "convenience" in the issue seems to be that of private interests claiming title to this property.

With regard to Roaches Run, Mr. Cassidy gives a misleading impression when he says that it has been taxed by Virginia since 1669. The fact here is that the area in question was granted to private individuals, under patent, as waste and unappropriated land within the last decade. In granting the patents Virginia carelessly assumed that the area was within her boundaries, even though it was actually a part of a tidal river which cannot be legally acquired by private individuals.

The decisions of the Supreme Court on this question are also involved in disagreement. Of course, the court has never adjudicated a dispute between the United States and Virginia over this line. If it had done so, the issue would not now be raised. But the court has decided a number of private cases which turned upon location of the District-Virginia line. In each case it has construed the language of the original charter as meaning that the title obtained by the Government from Maryland includes the bed of the Potomac, as it runs through the District, to the high-water mark on the Virginia side. It would be farfetched to suppose that the decision would be any different if the State of Virginia were a party to a dispute, for that simple fact could in no way change the original charter nor the basic principles of law by which it has been interpreted.

Mr. Cassidy's citation of the Maryland vs. West Virginia case is likewise unfortunate, for it is wholly irrelevant to the point at issue. Where it forms a boundary between these two States the Potomac is not a tidal river. Its shore and bed could be and were acquired by private individuals. The court merely recognized this right of prescription and adjusted the boundary accordingly. A comparable case could not arise in the tidal section of the river with which the commission had to deal.

Apparently it is the commission which has ignored the essential facts of the dispute and the substantial body of law that has been built upon those facts. The minority report through which one member of the commission once sought to develop these facts never materialized. As a result the entire issue is now plunged in chaos, from which it may have to be rescued by rejection of the proposed settlement and the institution of judicial proceedings in the Supreme Court.

To Fame By The York Road.

George Santayana has declared that, in art, "to portray passion is admirable, to betray it is despicable." And Lewis Gates has added that the perfect poet should drain every emotion imaginatively, while succumbing to none. Lizette Woodworth Reese fulfilled these and many other exacting requirements of the poet's craft.

In her two volumes of charming autobiography—with a style as lucid as Trollope's—she shows that, externally, nothing ever happened to her. She was brought up beyond the suburbs of a discerning city, "among those favored people who lived on the York Road," where "a ride to Baltimore was a matter of meticulous satisfaction." She taught school for nearly half a century. She "made her home with a niece." Hers was a life as placid as Cowper's before his madness, as sane as Wordsworth's after his visit to revolutionary France.

Moreover, Miss Reese had no fine frenzies: "I have never understood the expression in the Bible, 'the pen of a ready writer.'" She heeded the advice of Horace for the making of a poem, followed faithfully the command of a great French stylist for revision—revision—and then more revision. As she herself simply put it, "I kept on writing." And she died, on Tuesday, within three weeks of her eightieth birthday, still keeping on—at work upon her first novel.

The body of her verse is not charged with violence, but with emotion all the more effective because controlled—because artistically mastered and infinitely moving. No unmarried woman ever dipped a less spinster pen, no school mistress ever wrote less like a pedagog. Lacking the sweeping intensity of Edgar Allan Poe, she was nevertheless as fine a craftsman as that other great poet who has his last resting place in Baltimore. Lizette Woodworth Reese gave additional and enduring distinction to a city which has always been quietly proud of its distinctive personality.

Taxpayer's Complaint.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In one of the suburbs of our beautiful Capital City there has come to my notice an incident which makes me wonder just what has become of the rights of a taxpayer in the District of Columbia.

The question in my mind is just this: Why should any one or group of taxpaying residents have to get down on their knees to the District of Columbia "governors" who hold sway in the big building on Pennsylvania avenue and beg them to bestow sidewalks and lights on the thoroughfare on which they have been living and paying taxes for 15 years? Just whose streets have been given the benefit of these said people's taxes?

Has it come to the point where the residents of this un-District thoroughfare, located in a restricted zone, must keep on wading through mud on this pitch dark road at night and paying taxes much higher than property owners on improved adjoining streets? Repeated attempts have been made by these property owners to get some action on this disgraceful situation, but to no avail. This thoroughfare is just one-half block from Rhode Island avenue and leads on to the beautiful Langdon Park, on which the District has been spending the taxpayers' money for several years. It does anything but enhance the beauty of the park. ROY L. FORD.

The D. C.-Virginia Boundary Dispute

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Referring to a somewhat lengthy article in The Post of December 11, relative to the report of the District of Columbia-Virginia Boundary Commission and the editorial based on same, it is quite clear to anyone familiar with the boundary matter why the Government agency which inspired the article wanted to keep its identity a secret. The article in question is so full of erroneous and incorrect statements as to qualify it for the fiction section rather than the news section.

The Boundary Commission took between 3,000 and 4,000 pages of sworn testimony accompanied by approximately 400 exhibits, and anyone who cares to analyze the testimony cannot help but conclude that the claims of the Federal Government were proven to be fallacious, while the great mass or testimony shows that Virginia is entitled to more than awarded by the commission, so if there is any complaint or criticism, it is on the part of Virginia.

To quote the official records to prove the misstatements in the news article in question would require too much space, so attention will be directed to a few of the main erroneous statements. The picture drawn of the establishment of dumps, etc., along the Mount Vernon boulevard is certainly some stretch of imagination. With the exception of a small tract of land owned by the Smoot Sand & Gravel Co., the entire area between the Alexandria corporation line to the railroad bridge, east of the west boundary line of the Mount Vernon boulevard, is owned by the Federal Government—barring the subgrade lands in Four-Mile Run and Roaches Run.

In the case of Roaches Run, the Federal Government has established a bird sanctuary by the simple process of invoking the doctrine of "squatter sovereignty." This area was granted, devised, sold, transferred and taxes levied thereon and collected by the Commonwealth of Virginia since October 21, 1669. More than $3,000 in taxes have been paid on this area since 1928, when it was acquired by the present owners.

As to the exploitation of the Virginia shore by private individuals, it is only necessary to point out that from the Alexandria corporation line to Key Bridge, the Federal Government has acquired practically the entire water front by purchase.

With reference to a supposed Supreme Court decision by which the "miasmatic swampy delta between Rock Creek and the Eastern Branch has been changed, the decision in question has nothing whatever to do with the Virginia boundary. Neither did the United States Supreme Court ever decide that the boundary between the District of Columbia and Virginia was at high water mark on the Virginia shore.

The Virginia boundary, so far as the Potomac River is concerned, has never been before the Supreme Court except on one occasion, and that was in Maryland vs. West Virginia, 217 U. S. 577, in which the court said: "Taking it altogether, we consider it established that Virginia has a proprietary right on the south shore to low water mark." * * * "To that extent, Virginia has shown her rights on the river so clearly as to make them indisputable."

In the claim before the Boundary Commission, the Federal Government placed its reliance on three cases in which the U. S. Supreme Court handed down decisions, the Marine Railway & Coal Co. case, 257 U. S. 47; the Morris case, 174 U. S. 196, and the Smoot Sand & Gravel case, 283 U. S., though it does not seem that Government counsel could have been in real earnest, because these cases dealt with simple riparian problems only, and in which the Supreme Court was estopped from dealing weth the matter of boundary by reason of constitutional limitations. In order that the Supreme Court may adjudicate a boundary matter, the controversy must be between two sovereignties, either two States or a State and the Federal Government.

In not one of the three cases on which the Government relied, could the boundary question have been adjudicated because the Commonwealth of Virginia was not a party ex parte to the proceedings, consequently any comments which were made by the Supreme Court while interesting would have no weight when the actual question was constitutionally before the court. This doctrine is fully set forth in the opinion written by Chief Justice John Marshall in Cohens vs. Virginia, 6 Wheaton 398.

It will be quite apparent to anyone who is interested enough to study the hearings of the Boundary Commission, that the decision of the commission is backed by overwhelming testimony, and that in rendering their opinion, they leaned toward the Federal Government, if there was any leaning whatsoever.

JAMES E. CASSIDY.

"All Rot."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read much about the foolish Townsend pension plan and it emphasizes the unhealthy minds of our people. First, the Townsend plan would make indigent people the preferred class. People who never made $100 a month would get as a gift $200 per month. They don't need that much.

I would benefit by the plan as I am 65 years old and cannot find work that I have strength to do, but I am heartily against it, and the bonus also. I hate the word "bonus." Soldiers will need the bonus more when they are 10 years older than they do now. And the plea that it would scatter money, thereby priming the pump, is all rot. If scattering Government funds would bring good times, how would it do for Uncle Sam once a month to send every man, woman and child $10? There is just as much sense in one as the other.

JOHN WINSTON MEADE.

Washington, Dec. 17.

"Italy Is Mussolini."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Salvemini's lecture at the Town Hall Forum Sunday night was an insult to the intelligence of the American people in his talk of democracy-fascism. The democracy he compared with fascism has nothing to do whatsoever with the American democracy, of which we are justly proud. His is a democracy of professional politicians whose only object was personal grandeur and gain.

Why does he show so much venom against fascism? Is it because the betterment of the people comes first? When they say the "fatherland first," it means that the condition of 45,000,000 people has to be improved and not that of only a few individuals. That is fascism.

When he was a member of the Italian government, with his beautiful democracy, the country was suffering a serious crisis. Strikes, bolshevism, anarchism, riots and many other destructive ailments prevailed. What did his democracy do? It tried to cure them with beautiful phrases, but officials were very active in keeping their very profitable positions at the cost of the nation's life. He contends that it is better to be dying under his democracy than to try facism, because it was sure death. Yet ten years of fascism show that Italy is very much alive; so much alive that bigger nations are jealous of her, as the present situation shows.

His arguments have no foundation. He speaks of Italy as it was before fascism, when he was there. But of today's Italy, how can he speak with conviction when he has not been there for ten years?

If the Italian people are not behind Mussolini, as he contends, how does it happen that even the women have donated their most treasured possessions, such as their wedding rings? It is time all the fair-minded people convinced themselves that Mussolini is Italy and Italy is Mussolini. ALFIO CARTA.

Note To Crime Officers.

The Post Impressionist

"Name This Child."

Post Office, Thursday.

EVEN intolerance has its lighter side—for the victims. One common characteristic of persecution is a lack of humor on the persecutors' part. But, almost always, the persecuted manage to see some humor among the devastating results of their sufferings.

Today, the anti-Fascists of Italy, the non-Nazi recipients of Nazi attention in Germany, whisper a few anecdotes which are not without some compensating laughter. St. Barbara smiled in the arena. Doubtless a chuckle was now and then heard in the catacombs of Rome. Certainly a few flickers of amusement must pass among those increasing thousands of Russians dwelling under Soviet rule who won't be convinced that "Religion is the opium of the people."

Our friend Boris, just returned from Russia, says so.

He has brought several stories which arrived more quickly by cable. For instance, that one about the village soviet which burned the works of Tolstoi: Tolstoi, whom the Orthodox Church excommunicated living because he was for a while unorthodox, those rural liberals excommunicated dead because he was never unorthodox enough.

But Boris brought also a few stories that were new—at least to us.

And among them was this about Father Ivan.

Father Ivan had been a Czar-time agnostic and professor of biology at a great Russian university. Lately, however, he joined that movement which is bringing so many of the intelligentsia, not only into the Church, but into the ranks of its clergy.

Also, like his fellows, he wasn't having a particularly fat time of it. He couldn't get a job teaching biology, because of his faith. For much the same reason, he couldn't get any other job. Not having a job, he couldn't have a food-card or a rooming-permit. So he had to live, in a back-yard toolshed of Moscow, on the surreptitious charity of the faithful.

Whereas courage was prevalent, not a few of them remained surreptitious in other duties besides those connected with alms-giving. Such people, being members of the Communist party in the light of day, confined their religious activities to the twilight hours. They believed devotely, but they didn't care to be seen in church—considered it impolitic to be known at large in their religious capacity.

There were even pious individuals who were capable of keeping their faith secret from those nearest and dearest to them. Thus, even to the end of Father Ivan's first year at Moscow, people whom he had never seen before would be coming to his toolshed under cover of darkness, for some ghostly office or some spiritual advice.

One night, at about 10 o'clock, there was a timid tap at the shed door. Father Ivan opened it and fronted, in the moonlight, an old woman. At his invitation, she entered and, unwinding the shawl that swathed her from her gray head to her knees, revealed, held close in one arm, a baby:

"I want him baptized, batiushka."

While the priest warmed the water for the immersion in the little tub, he asked her name and address. But all she would say was:

"This baby's father is my son and a Communist. He would never forgive me if he knew I'd brought his son to you. Yet I couldn't let the little thing go on in life without baptism, so I waited till everybody was asleep in one room. Please hurry—and please name the boy after his father and the good St. Nicholas."

That was a busy night for Father Ivan—and a night of coincidences. An hour after this woman had gone, another, but younger, woman arrived—also with a baby for baptism and also asking that the name given should be the name of the popular Bishop of Myra:

"My family are Communists and don't approve of this sort of thing. I'd have come earlier, but I had to wait till they were all asleep—and I myself fell asleep while waiting."

The third visitor was a man and arrived at midnight. But there the differences stopped:

"My womenfolk are ardent Communists," he explained. "They'd raise an awful fuss if they even suspected what I was doing. I'd have come earlier, but I had to wait till they were asleep—and I'm afraid I dozed once or twice myself, waiting. I want the boy named——"

Yes, you've guessed it: named for St. Nicholas of Myra in Lycia, the patron of Christmas stockings "hung in a row"—and of more important things besides.

And Father Ivan guessed it, too. "I think," he said, "that you'd better go back home and tell your wife and mother what you want me to do."

* * *

Baptism in the Orthodox Church is performed by triple immersion.

But three baptisms of the same baby? That's another matter!

Ballyhoo In Rome.

ROME, Dec. 18.—There are quite a few foreigners in Italy who are going through the motions of kicking themselves in the trousers because they permitted themselves to believe that if Italy didn't get what she wanted in Abyssinia, Mussolini would kick up a war with Britain, beginning with an attack on the British fleet with his airplanes and submarines.

Mussolini got away with it because the British backed down, so there is no way of knowing whether he was willing to take a desperate chance or was running a bluff. He has made some very desperate remarks in his orations since his heart was touched by the plight of the slaves in a land 3,000 miles away, including one to the effect that it were fitter for Italians to live one day like lions than a hundred years like sheep.

And there is no doubt that he was up against it, because, having taken a long chance in Abyssinia, he couldn't hope to pull out his army; otherwise he'd have to call home the unemployed Italian soldiers and civilian laborers for whom freight tolls had been paid to fight a war of liberation and admit that he was licked. Italy would have been worse off than ever if he had done that, and a dictator has held his power by always going forward and never giving an inch.

• • • • •

STILL, if he had tackled England the Italian task would have been just too big, and the Italian people probably won't realize for some time what a beautiful favor the English did them when they decided that the issue wasn't worth fighting for now.

England's case is the old story of the racketeer who got his and tried to turn square but wasn't allowed to. Now the British are involved in the Abyssinian job just as deeply as their old partner, for they have undertaken to do by diplomacy precisely the same thing in principle that the Italians set out to do by force.

It's just as bad to steal one acre in Abyssinia by diplomatic action as to steal a whole country at the point of a bayonet, even though the bayonets may be carried by hired African troops and Italian liberators may generously remain in the rear permitting them to reap the honors.

Now that the British have kindly offered Mussolini certain portions of Negus the beautiful principle for which the League of Nations was willing to start a World War is repudiated. And Mussolini, having been offered so much, couldn't strain the principle any worse by demanding more.

• • • •

CERTAINLY these days in Rome have been a wonderful demonstration of the art of ballyhoo and controlled public emotion, amounting at times to hysteria. The Italian papers got orders to give the English hell—a system which permits one nation to heap foul insults upon the people of another without putting them down in diplomatic correspondence and without accepting any responsibility for them.

The wedding ring and old gold propaganda was beautifully handled and the firm hand of coercion remained invisible, though suspected throughout the collection. Of course, all wedding rings were turned in voluntarily—the most solemn sacrifice that an Italian woman can make for her country next to the gift of her son or husband—but those who remember the subtle insistence which characterized the Liberty Loan campaigns in the United States will appreciate the force of neighborhood opinion on any woman who didn't much care to give up her ring or the priest who would have preferred to keep his gold chain.

There is a curious conflict in the propaganda which is heard on every side in Italy regarding the character of the Italian people. They are, on the one hand, a kind and friendly lot, with pride in their hearts, but no trace of arrogance, who greet a stranger with courtesy and music and would much rather be a friend than a foe to any man. These characteristics are not mere inventions, for a stranger in the land encounters them on every hand, except in the unfortunate moments when he speaks American and is mistaken for an English pig.

But then, having explained how warm-hearted they are, the Italians go on to insist that they are also, in their new character under the Duce, a warlike people, with great national ambitions, who will fight anyone who tries to interfere. There is evidence of this, too, and no doubt the martial spirit extends in diminishing degree down into the poor neighborhoods, but the fury of patriotism is hottest, as always, among the class which produces politicians, officers and petty executives of state.

In Rome, the capital, where the bureaucrat naturally thrives, this ferocity of the white collar element is very impressive, and that probably is why so many foreigners were convinced that Italy, though broke, wouldn't hesitate to fight all comers in Europe while carrying on another major campaign 3,000 miles from home. If the Duce was bluffing, he certainly kept his nerve up to the final instant, when a flicker of doubt in his voice or eye might have ruined him at home and abroad.

Japanese Viewpoint

It Is Argued That The Stimson Doctrine Is Largely Responsible For Japan's Growing Military Pressure On China.

By K. K. Kawakami.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

SUPERFICIALLY, the international disagreement, which is at the bottom of the politico-military upheaval in north China, is between Tokyo and Nanking. Fundamentally, it is between Japan on one hand, and the Western powers, particularly the United States and the leading nations within the League of Nations, on the other. The explanation is simple.

Never since Manchukuo, under Japanese protection, became independent in 1932 has China given up the hope that some day, somehow, the erstwhile three eastern provinces may yet be restored to her. It is a forlorn hope, yet one entirely human and understandable. China, of course, knows that without outside aid she is militarily and politically incapable of bringing Manchuria back to her own fold. Her hope lies in the foreign influence which she thinks may yet be exercised sufficiently to yank the seceded region from the Japanese hold. Four years after the Manchurian incident, her eyes are still intently fixed upon Washington and Geneva, particularly Washington.

This is not surprising. The United States has never explicitely renounced Mr. Stimson's pronunciamento which committed this country, and which to a large extent caused other nations to commit themselves, not to recognize Manchukuo as an independent state under Japanese tutelage. To the Japanese the Stimson doctrine was an assumption of moral superiority of the Western nations and put a stigma of ostracism upon Japan.

• • • • •

TO the Chinese it was something more important, much more material. In it they saw a tacit promise that the foreign powers under American leadership would keep the Manchurian question a live international issue until it was settled to the benefit of China and to the humiliation of Japan. To them, moreover, it was a hint that China should, under no circumstances, yield to Japanese pressure and enter into diplomatic intercourse with Manchukuo, but that she must persist in a policy of resistance, overt or covert, direct or indirect, until such time as her Western friends could usher in the day of reckoning in her interest and at the expense of both Manchukuo and Japan.

China would not have been human had she not heeded this advice. It was advice not merely alluring but backed by the great prestige, the enormous wealth, and the puissant might of a nation which, moreover, commanded the following of other nations, of which almost equally powerful and opulent. To the Chinese mind the advice, under such circumstances, had the force not merely of persuasion but of coercion.

Little wonder, then, that China in the past five years has followed an extremely oblique course, making at times a feint of friendliness toward Japan, but always with a mental reservation that some day her Western friends would pick her chestnut out of the Japanese fire, and hand Manchuria back to her.

"Has not America given us to understand that our recognition of Manchukuo would be detrimental to us?"

"If the present Democratic administration is somewhat lukewarm toward us, will not the return of the Republican Party to power brings forth a resurgence of aggressive American diplomacy in the Far East?"

"Is it not more than probable that America under Republican administration, in 1941 if not in 1937, will call a second Washington Conference as the Harding-Hughes regime called the first in 1921, and undo what Japan has done at our door?"

So ask the Chinese.

• • • •

UNDER such circumstances rapprochement between Japan and China is all but impossible to achieve. Nanking, when pressed by Tokyo, would profess a willingness to work for the readjustment of Sino-Japanese relations in a spirit of co-operation, following all the while a policy of resistance, usually passive, but at times flaring up into open antagonism. It has taken an attitude of sitting on the fence, bidding for time and waiting for its Occidental friends to come to relieve it of the discomfort of a posture which has become perennial.

The foreign office at Tokyo, anxious to place Sino-Japanese relations upon a sound basis, has made honest and strenuous efforts to that end. Such Japanese efforts, largely if not entirely for reasons I have explained, have elicited, but half-hearted response from whatever powers existed at Nanking. Any program which Japan considers necessary for the satisfactory readjustment of her relationship with China must of necessity include recognition of Manchukuo by the Nanking government. That, indeed, is the crux of the whole Sino-Japanese situation.

Only if and when the independence of Manchukuo is accepted by China as a fact accomplished and unalterable, only if and when China is convinced that the obstructionist tactics she has employed against her next-door neighbor have done herself nothing but harm, will there emerge real peace and friendliness between Tokyo and Nanking. Such a change of heart will not come to the Chinese so long as they are encouraged to cherish the hope that some day Washington and London and Geneva will take vigorous measures for the undoing of Japan. The West; not China, nor that much stigmatized body known as the Japanese militarists, is the real stumbling block of Japanese diplomacy.

• • • •

AS far as Japan's objective vis-a-vis China's is concerned, there is no difference of opinion between the Japanese foreign office and the Japanese military. That objective, as I have intimated, is the readjustment of Sino-Japanese relations on a sound basis which calls for a reorientation of Chinese diplomacy. Like all or most foreign offices, the Gaimusho, as we term our foreign office, is solicitous to attain the end it has in view by peaceable methods. It takes to heart the wisdom of "making haste slowly," and is willing to follow patiently the long and tortuous course of diplomacy.

On the other hand, the Japanese military, particularly those on the spot in China who are in direct and constant contact with Chinese military chieftains and Chinese soldiers, are convinced that the honeyed words of Chinese diplomats are luring the foreign office at Tokyo into the mire of illusion; that Nanking is deliberately duping and double-crossing Tokyo; that nothing but drastic measures will bring the Chinese to their senses. They are impatient and chafing at the leash of diplomacy of the foreign office, whose arms have been "none too" strong since the Manchurian explosion of 1931.

And in the background of this unhappy picture appear the ponderous figures of Uncle Sam and John Bull. Further in the background looms the ominous specter of Red Russia. These, more seriously than the Japanese military themselves, hamper the diplomacy of the foreign office at Tokyo as regards China. Not until the West unreservedly recognizes the principle that the Far East must be left to work out its own destiny under Japanese leadership and tutelage will there be a real and lasting peace between China and Japan.

Freighter in Distress After Loss of Rudder

San Francisco, Dec. 18 (U.P.).—The freighter Ethan Allen, a 4,037-ton vessel which sailed from Corpus Christi, Tex., early in November, was reported in distress approximately 670 miles southeast of Yokohama tonight.

The vessel was not reported in immediate danger. Radio advices said she had lost her rudder in rough water, and that mountainous seas were battering her as she wallowed helplessly.

The Bordeaux Maru, the Norwegian steamer G. C. Broveg, the Dollar liners President Grant and President Jackson, and the freighter Melville Dollar were reported preparing to aid the stricken ship.

A Little Story

By Karl Schriftgiesser

A Better One Missed.

HERE I was in the White House, completely lost in the midst of what next morning's newspapers described as a brilliant and colorful gathering of the elite of Washington, but which looked to me like a large group of ordinary persons, some having a very nice time and showing it, and others having an even better time and trying to look bored. It was pretty noisy, despite the meekness of the purplish punch, and there right in the middle of all this so-called glamour and decided clamor I found myself talking Communism with a noted educator. Not until one of us inadvertently lit a cigarette did the ever watchful Secret Service show the least perturbation.

So absorbed did we become in our discussion that we both missed the historic slipping of the diplomatic pink slip, a sight observed by keener journalistic eyes, and one which I regret very much not having seen. It is just such happenings as that which would have made the glittering reception memorable for years to come and no doubt the description, as it mellowed with the years, would become one of those family anecdotes to be trotted out at the proper moment through several generations. I should like to have been able to say, in my dotage, that I was present when the Ambassador's wife lost her pink slip back in those good old days before the Revolution when all was gaiety and laughter in the National Capital. But alas, I was talking Communism with a professor, dealing in academic generalities when I could have been watching life slip by.

NEVERTHELESS I did pick up an ancedote of passing merit, although it was given to me with the Rooseveltian warning that it was "off the record" I am sure, if I sufficiently hide the identity of its narrator, that I will be accused of no worse a journalistic offense than the reporters who saw the pink slip slip—and told. Let us say, then, that it was "learned on high authority by a source close to the gentleman who shall be nameless." Or just that "it was learned today."

I had asked this learned man, who, incidentally, is noted both for his liberalism on many subject and his disbelief in the fundamentals of Karl Marx, to put it mildly, what was his opinion of the law forbidding the teaching of Marxism in our public schools. His opinion, he took no time in informing me, was that of any intelligent man. He thought the law silly and even went so far as to say that he believed children should be taught about communism when their courses in Government and history led naturally to that subject.

• • • •

"THAT reminds me of the war," he said. "You will recall those awful days, of course, and some of the very ridiculous things we silly people did in the name of Patriotism. It was very trying. It was especially trying for me, for I was endeavoring to remain an intellectual and be patriotic at the same time. Being sound in body, my country called upon me and I eagerly went to serve it. It did not want me for the fighting, but, as in the case of many of us, they utilized our special knowledge. Being an educator, I was naturally attached to the Intelligence Service, ahem.

"My chief called me in one day and asked me to go about the country and inform my friends in the educational world that the Government was in great need of linguists. It wanted them to come to Washington as translators not only for use by the spy hunters, but in the one hundred and one things that must be done during war and which cannot always be done in the native tongue. Especially did it want men who could read, write, and talk German. So I started on my quest.

• • • •

"I WENT, naturally, to those institutions which had not then abandoned a love for the classics and the languages and I found many men who immediately set aside their other tasks to aid the country through the use of their special knowledge. Then I went back to the university where I was at that time the head of the language department and I found my colleagues in despair. It seems that during my absence the Legislature had passed a law forbidding the teaching of German!

"Here I was, searching the countryside for people who could read and write German for their country, and there was the same country making it illegal to teach that very language!"

"What did you do," I asked.

"Oh," he said, "I had to wrestle with my conscience quite a bit. I finally reached a compromise. Not knowing when the war would end, nor how many more German translators I would have to supply in the future, I told them to forget the law, and we taught German just as we always had done."

That, I thought, was a very good story, and one which ought to be passed along for the benefit of those teachers who may, some day, have to explain to their pupils in English literature, for example, something of how the poet Shelley got that way. It's not as good, of course, as my description of the pink slip would have been, if I had seen that historic and silken catastrophe. But it will have to do.

Admiral Clark To Retire Jan. 1 After 46 Years

Upham to Succeed Him as Chairman of General Board of Navy.

Rear Admiral Frank S. Clark, U. S. N., chairman of the Navy's General Board, will retire from active duty on January 1, it was announced yesterday by Secretary Swanson.

Veteran of more than 46 years of active service in the Navy, Clark will be succeeded by Rear Admiral Frank B. Upham, U. S. N., who recently completed two years' service as commander in chief of the Asiatic Fleet. Admiral Upham is expected to arrive here late this month to assume his new duties.

Secretary Swanson yesterday addressed a letter to Admiral Clark on the latter's sixty-fourth birthday. "The department regrets your retirement from active service and takes this occasion to extend to you its heartiest congratulations and appreciation for your long and distinguished service to our Nation," Swanson told the retiring officer.

During the Spanish-American War Admiral Clark served in Commodore Schley's Flying Squadron, participating in the Battle of Santiago in 1898. He was awarded the Navy Cross for World War duty.

Admiral Upham entered the Naval Academy in 1889. He served on the Olympia, flagship of Admiral Dewey, during the Spanish-American War. He holds the Legion of Honor and the Navy Cross for his World War record.

Peiping Faculty Raps Police Cruelty in Riots

Peiping, China, Dec. 19 (Thursday) (AP).—Faculty members of Peiping University sent telegrams to the national government at Nanking today, denouncing "unnecessary cruelty by Peiping authorities" in breaking up a demonstration of students opposed to the new semi-autonomous political council of Hopeh and Chahar provinces in North China.

The council was secretly inaugurated yesterday, students massing a few hours later when they learned that the political regime had become operative.

Student demonstrations were also held in Tientsin..

Cabinet Post for Frank Walker Likely After NEC Resignation

Roosevelt Emphasizes Promise of Friend to Return to Administration Soon; He Is Mentioned as Successor to Farley or Roper.

Frank C. Walker, who resigned yesterday as executive director of the National Emergency Council, generally is expected to return to the Roosevelt Administration within another month or two, probably in the role of a Cabinet officer.

This expectation was strengthened yesterday by the emphasis which President Roosevelt placed on a promise from Walker to return to the Federal Government as soon as he has put his private affairs in order. His resignation was necessitated by the death of a kinsman and the illness of another which left him the manager of a chain of theaters.

Mr. Walker has been mentioned repeatedly as a successor to Postmaster General James A. Farley, when the latter steps out of the Cabinet to assume active management of President Roosevelt's reelection campaign. Farley, who is chairman of the National Democratic and the New York State Democratic committees, is expected to resign his Cabinet post early next year.

The possibility exists that Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper may be shifted to the postmaster general's post when the Farley resignation takes place. In that event it is believed that Walker may be appointed secretary of commerce. A lawyer by profession, Walker also has had extensive business experience.

Walker's resignation yesterday marked the second time he has stepped down from the directorship of the NEC. Once before the necessities of his private affairs forced him to leave the Roosevelt Administration. The President named Lyle C. Alverson, solicitor of the NEC, as that agency's acting executive director.

In his letter of resignation Walker, one of the President's closest political friends, asserted he had been "in agreement with your fundamental purposes for more than a decade" and that "I have felt and now feel that your approach to the solution of the great problems that confront the American people is a correct one."

"Your leadership has been intelligent, courageous, and most important of all, intensely human and understanding," Walker told the President.

"I regret that some of the men in business and industry are so impatient with your efforts to bring about a new and better order in our country. I realize that it is difficult for them to adjust themselves quickly, but as the days go on I feel that their farsightedness and reasoned judgment will bring them to know how right you really are and how sorely we need you.

LYLE C. ALVERSON.

"Of this I am certain, that the great mass of the American people are wholeheartedly behind you. Do know that I shall always stand ready to be of service to you and your great cause."

Temporary Separation.

The President, in reply, asserted it was with the greatest reluctance that he released Walker and only "with the understanding that you will return to Government service in Washington as soon as your private business has been put in order."

"I am glad that your separation from the service, therefore, is temporary and not a permanent one," the President added.

Mr. Roosevelt praised Walker for the "high character of the service which you have rendered" and went on to point out that "your rare abilities as an organizer and as an executive were brought constantly into play in the discharge of your duties and in simple frankness I must say that no official could have rendered more efficient service in solving the multiplicity of problems with which it fell to your lot to deal."

The Once Over

That New White House Kitchen.

The Democrats now have the best cooking arrangements of any Administration in history. No President from Washington up has been in a better position to get his eggs cooked properly and delivered faster than President Roosevelt.

• • • •

Mrs. Roosevelt formally unveiled the new $100,000 White House kitchen the other day and it proved a sensation.

• • • •

It is streamlined, air conditioned, electrically operated and has everything but automatic polishing. If it were not for the smell of coffee you would think you were in a futuristic living room.

• • • •

The President can now get a full course dinner by pressing a button, and put on a barbecue by merely throwing a switch

• • • •

New Deal omelettes will make the trip from shell to President in time never dreamed of by the Republican Party and the speed that the Brain Trust flapjacks will make between pan and man will exceed the wildest dreams of the Nation's founders

• • • •

It will mean a full realization of the broader life by White House chefs, dishwashers and waiters.

• • • •

And a diplomat waiting for his soup will no longer be playing the part of the Forgotten Man.

• • • •

Elevators have replaced winding stairways, every mutton chop has its private elevator and there is a private bath for every dish.

One of the kitchen features is an electric soup tank so big that Mr. Farley is thinking of offering it to the Republicans for their coming convention. With the soup in it.

• • • •

The kitchen has so many gadgets that even if a Republican is elected next year he will have to keep the Roosevelts in office to show him how to cook

• • • •

It just goes to show how Mr. Roosevelt thinks of everything.

The White House needed a new kitchen. The old one was the one Washington slept in.

• • • •

It was so old-fashioned and poorly equipped that when a President invited more than four or five guests to dinner he had to start cooking a week ahead of time

• • • •

The decision to spend $100,000 was prompted by a discovery last June that a diplomat sitting in a chair in the White House dining room had been waiting there ever since the Hoover administration for a hot cup of coffee and some buttered toast

Lawyer Faints, Forcing Recess Of High Court

Second Such Incident in 10 Days; Aid Given by Reed, First Victim.

By the Associated Press.

Illness of a lawyer forced the second recess of the Supreme Court in ten days when Frederick B. Campbell, of New York, fainted yesterday while arguing a case.

As the silver-haired attorney slumped over a reading stand, Solicitor General Stanley Reed, who collapsed while arguing the validity of the Bankhead cotton control act December 10, was among the first to rush to his assistance.

Reed and other lawyers grabbed Campbell before he could fall. After a few moments of confusion, Chief Justice Hughes announced a recess and the black-robed justices filed from the bench.

The New Yorker, stretched out in a chair, was revived with water and a drink of whisky. He was assisted to the marshal's office, where his condition was reported greatly improved after several hours of rest.

Court was resumed with Samson Selig, an associate, taking Campbel's place in disputing a Government claim to nearly $3,000,000 in assets of dissolved Russian insurance companies in the United States.

The claim was based on the Roosevelt-Litvinoff agreement of 1933, which accompanied United States recognition of Soviet Russia, and which assigned Soviet claims in this Nation to the Federal Government.

Several justices asked questions of David E. Hudson, Special Assistant Attorney General, interpreted by some as indicating doubt whether the court could consider the dispute because New York State courts have accepted jurisdiction over the funds in question.

Hospital Children To Get Yule Trees

Christmas trees will be placed in the children's wards of every hospital in Washington, local florists announced yesterday through two members of their Christmas-tree committee, Herbert Sauber and Clarence J. Shaffer.

Donors of the trees are asking that decorations, tinsel trimmings and bright ornaments be contributed by persons who are not using them in their own homes. Most of the decorations are expected to come from homes where the children are grown and where gaily bedecked trees are no longer a part of the holiday celebration.

This is the third year florists over the country have united in bringing a touch of Christmas to hospital wards filled with boys and girls. The trees will be installed here within the next few days.

Fingerprinting Of Car Drivers Is Safety Plan

Experts Hold Conference; 'Slaughter' Deplored by Roper.

Fingerprinting of all motorists, strengthening of the merchant marine law and establishment of safety-first courses in public schools were taken under advisement yesterday as the Accident Prevention Conference, called by and assured of the support of President Roosevelt, ended a one-day session here.

Representatives of 25 State Governors and several hundred spokesmen for industrial, agricultural and civic interests throughout the Nation assembled for the safety symposium and laid the groundwork for an active campaign against all forms of accidents.

Slaughter, Says Roper.

Last night, as the delegates were homeward bound after having heard a short talk by President Roosevelt and formal addresses by Secretary of Commerce Roper and Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the American Red Cross, a plan of attack along the following lines had been tentatively decided upon:

Co-ordination of all agencies conconcerned with sea travel, to the end that marine disasters and accidents on shipboard may be prevented.

Standardization of traffic regulations.

Closer co-operation among the 30 to 40 different groups interested in accident prevention in the home.

Pooling of the facilities of auto manufacturers, driving clubs and safety device makers.

"That we should treat with comparitive complacency the wholesale slaughter of men, women and children is a disgrace to our intelligence as a Nation," the assembly was told by Secretary Roper.

Pointing out that accidents take 100,000 lives a year and injure an estimated 9,000,000 others, he emphasized that the responsibility of prevention lies, not with the Federal Government but with individuals, industries, State and local communities. He added, however:

"The Government needs to provide accurate statistics on fatal and nonfatal accidents. We must devise a way of getting these statistics on a national scale at least once a month. Study of causes of accidents must be brought up to date. Causes which applied ten yearsago may not apply today. Let's know the causes of today, and let us place the blame where it belongs, fearlessly."

Received by Roosevelt.

Receiving the conference's 11 committee chairmen at the White House, President Roosevelt said:

"I don't know what the answer to the accident situation is but we know that accidents are increasing and becoming a grave national question. You gentlemen must find the answer and I will help you up to the limit in trying to solve it."

Members of the delegation included W. Averell Harriman, of New York, chairman of the Union Pacific Railroad board; Barron G. Collier, former safety director of New York City; Thomas J. Watson, president of the International Business Machine Co., and Dr. B. L. Corbett, executive secretary of the Milwaukee safety commission.

Opening the meeting, which was held in the Commerce Department auditorium, Dr. Grayson produced statistics showing that 388,000 men, women and children have been killed in American highway accidents since 1920; last year alone 36,000 were killed and more than 1,000,000 were permanently or temporarily disabled; deaths from highway accidents alone in the last 15 years exceeded deaths in the six major wars by 144,000.

"We are accustomed," said Admiral Grayson, "to confronting and conquering great problems. The scourges of yellow fever and malaria challenged us and have been conquered through concerted effort and the sacrifice of the lives of great people. We have reduced the toll of tuberculosis toward the vanishing point.

"In the case of the great dseases, the problem of their cure and elimination was essentially and primarily the task of the medical profession. There was not much that the average man could do about it, but the menace which we are now discussing, the mounting and appalling toll of death and injury from accidents, does not come from external enemies of man, but is created and caused by ourselves.

"Only as each and every one of us participates in the attack on this problem can we succeed. The solution lies in self-education and self-discipline."

The Red Cross head reminded the conference that his organization inaugurated a safety crusade this year, one of the outstanding features of which is the establishment of highway emergency first-aid stations throughout the country. More than 1,100 have been set up thus far, he reported.

As part of the campaign, 3,700 chapters to date have succeeded in organizing 2,237 committees on home and farm accident prevention, Admiral Grayson declared.

Following the general session yesterday morning, the conference was divided into committee meetings at which specific remedies were discussed and acted upon. The respective groups concerned themselves with causes and remedies, rural and home accidents, urban street safety, co-operation with common carriers, co-operation with the automotive industry, uniform traffic regulations, driver training and law enforcement, education, co-operating with safety groups, safety in the air and safety at sea.

Chairman John L. Lovett, of the automotive co-operation unit, appointed sub-committees to obtain statistical data and co-operation from manufacturers, drivers' organizations and device distributors.

Representative Emmet O'Neil, of Kentucky, was authorized by the uniform traffic regulations committee to form a national organization consisting of one representative from each of the 48 States. It would act in an advisory capacity to encourage the standardization of driving rules throughout the country.

Many Accidents at Sea.

Last year 10,000 passengers and 21,000 seamen on 806 vessels were involved in marine casualties, according to the report of Chairman Walter Parker of the safety-at-sea committee. He urged remedial legislation to improve construction and maintenance standards, ships' personnel, operating methods and governmental supervision and inspection.

Expansion of the Commerce Department's Bureau of Air Commerce, studies of flying and ground operations and gathering of accurate statistics were recommended by the air safety unit, headed by Charles Horner in the absence of Senator William G. McAdoo, chairman.

Dr. Corbett's committee on driver training and law enforcement will consider the feasibility of creating training schools for drivers and making phonograph recordings of acicdent accounts for radio use.

'Red' Books Cleared

it can do. We will continue our investigation of other books as well."

Earlier, the board had denied Sullivan's request for a hearing to protest about alleged delay by the school officials in turning over materials he had previously requested—lists of textbooks, lists of magazines used in the schools, files of complaints about those magazines.

One author whose questioned book was upheld, Carl L. Becker, of Cornell University, commented, by wire to The Washington Post from Ithaca, N. Y.:

"I am not surprised to learn that the committee of the Board of Education has reported that my book, 'Modern History,' is fair and impartial in its presentation of communism and the Russian Soviet system.

Only History, He Says.

"It must be obvious to anyone who has read 'Modern History' without prejudice that I have attempted to tell what has occurred in modern times without pronouncing judgment on the goodness or badness of men or events."

Another author, Harold Rugg, had previously written the board denying any connection with socialist or communist parties, protesting the charges against him, and saying he would be delighted to aid the board "in its fight to maintain the democratic study of the problems of the American people in the schools."

Board members in general discussion commented on the report as follows:

Benjamin L. Gaskins, attorney—"Splendid report."

Henry J. Gilligan—"This committee has done a tremendous work and a fine job."

Henry I. Quinn made the motion that the report lay over to the January 2 meeting.

Achorn Book Outlawed.

The book ousted from the teachers' colleges yesterday by Dr. Ballou's order was Achorn's "European Civilization and Politics," by a Harvard traveling professor. The book was accepted for use in the social studies course at Wilson Teachers' College on recommendation of the late Prof. Carl L. Lutz earlier in the fall.

When the board appointed Lutz's successor, Dr. Paul O. Carr, a fortnight ago, Carr looked over the textbooks and questioned Achorn's book. Dr. E. C. Higbie, president of the college, and George J. Jones, head of the history department of the white schools, scanned the book and joined in a recommendation that it be discontinued.

On the four questioned high school textbooks, the report of the textbook committee, composed of Dr. Robert A. Maurer, chairman, and Mrs. Lenore W. Smith and Dr. J. Hayden Johnson, disposed of the communism charges as follows:

"An Introduction to American Civilization," by Rugg—"no mention of communism in this textbook, not even a suggestion of it," but merely a discussion of American civilization's economic life.

Only Factual Statements.

"Changing Civilization," by Rugg—simply factual statements about Russia, although the implication might be drawn that Russia's present form of government might be desirable because of the credit given for improvement of living standards of the Russian people.

"Our World Today," by DeForest Stull and Roy W. Hatch—"mere statements of fact . . . afford no substantial basis for any suggestion that this book creates an impression favorable to communism."

Throughout its 21-page report, the committee stressed its belief that "partial quotations are unfair" to "a proper appreciation of the spirit and purpose of the historical presentation of the subjects treated."

Teachers Are Indorsed.

It concluded with an indorsement of the present school setup and its teachers, saying:

"The subject matter in a textbook is not the only factor of influence. The way in which the subject matter is presented is of equal importance. We have a corps of teachers in the Washington public schools, carefully selected for their specialized training in the proper use and presentation of historical material, by whom these books are interpreted.

"The teachers, moreover, are supervised by competent officers. We feel they understand and sympathize with the principles of American history and government and all that our constitutional ideals signify. We believe they recognize the dangers to this country of Communist propaganda, and we expect them to guard against it."

Economy League's Juniors Hit Bonus

By the Associated Press.

W. Richardson Blair, jr., of Philadelphia, chairman of the national executive committee of the junior committee of the National Economy League, yesterday called the soldiers' bonus a "legacy" and opposed immediate payment.

In a letter to Ray Murphy, commander of the American Legion, Blair said there were 29,000,000 young men and women between the ages of 21 and 35 who would have "to pay the bill."

"It's a legacy which none of our group feel inclined to give," he said, adding that the veterans "were all patriots once and I find it hard to believe now that you want to be paid to be selling your patriotism in return for a mess of pottage."

MeyerProposes Industry Take Housing Lead

U. S. Failure Is Incentive to Private Builders, Publisher Holds.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 18.—Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post, today said private industry "should lead the way in bringing about major reforms" in the housing field.

"The fact that the Government has failed so lamentably to cooperate in developing low-cost housing in an efficient way," he told the New York Building Congress, "should serve as an added incentive to private industry to bend every effort toward a solution of this major problem."

Chief among the reasons for "this somewhat appalling" lack of cheap housing facilities, the publisher said, were "antiquated methods of financing, high interest rates, over-speculation, and above all things, a lack of close co-ordination in the building trades that would not be tolerated in any other industry."

Meyer said England has made "gigantic strides" within the last year, and has accomplished "nearly twice as much within one year in the way of modernization of housing facilities as we did in our peak year of construction in 1925."

He declared the time is at hand "for a really great and sustained revival" of residential construction.

Vote on Liquor Assured.

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., Dec. 18. A referendum on whether the State of West Virginia shall sell liquor in Morgan County apparently was assured within the next three months, as a result of a petition signed by more than 1,200 residents of the county and presented to the the required 25 per cent of the court here. Proponents said the petition contains 60 more names than voters.

STOP SAFE with WEED CHAINS

New Type Tire Chains Double the Mileage, Increase the Safety

DON'T GAMBLE with DEATH WEED CHAINS PUT ON HERE

LOOK FOR THIS SIGN AT SERVICE STATIONS

● Every added inch of snow kills more people in auto accidents—sends more persons in pain to hospital beds—wrecks more cars and shatters more nerves.

For snow wets tires and wet rubber always slips. (Try rubbing a dry eraser over glass. Then wet the rubber and feel it slide or skid.) That is why you need steel tire chains for safe driving in snow, sleet or mud. Because steel tire chains grip like cleats on a tractor wheel.

Don't take chances on "getting by" without Weed Chains. Too many drivers try that and as a result driving is worse than war. Auto accidents have killed 388,000 since 1920 while in all our wars since 1776 only 244,000 Americans were killed. This year we are headed for 1,000,000 accidents with 40,000 dead and 1,200,000 injured, involving 1,400,000 cars.

At this rate 1 out of every 17 cars is marked in blood.

Buy Weed Chains today—and ask for the new type Weed American Bar-Reinforced Tire Chains. These chains cut the cost of safety by doubling the mileage. They increase your margin of safety by stopping in much less distance. AAA Contest Board Official Test No. 3143 shows that a car with Weed American Bar-Reinforced Tire Chains on rear wheels stopped in 45.8% less distance than when no chains were used, and in 66.8% less distance when chains were used on all four tires.

These chains also give you the necessary traction to plow through drifts which might otherwise stall your car for hours. Made by the American Chain Company, Inc., Bridgeport, Conn., for passenger cars, trucks and buses.

Village Notes.

New York, Dec. 18.

A COPY of "Daniel Frohman Presents" is on my desk, and the snatches of it I've read are delightful . . . Discussing the famous Frohman office, hung with pictures of stars in the Frohman cluster, he writes: "Thus the spider, Time, has spun his web of memory across the rafters of my studio until through the years he has woven a tapestry. It seems so short a time since the figures in that tapestry moved and breathed and made the rooms echo with the music of their laughter. I am never alone, for I seem to hear the echo of voices, a note of music, or the tinkle of ice in tall glasses" . . . No other writer, I think, has written so gracefully of the same subject . . . He recalls his brother, Charles Frohman dying on the torpedoed Lusitania . . . Just before the boat plunged to destruction, Charles Frohman went back to the theater for an exit line . . . He said: "Why fear death? It is the most beautiful adventure in life" . . . It was suggested by one of the lines in his favorite play, "Peter Pan," where Peter says: "To die will be an awfully big adventure" . . . I like best C. F.'s final observation: "What I don't like about this is the water will be cold."

The veteran Daniel Frohman parades a great series of great names of the theater through the pages of his book . . . You are startled to hear Laurette Taylor pointing out a stage truth that has never occurred to me and rarely occurs to a director of a love scene . . . Arguing with the stage manager over a love scene in "The Seven Sisters," Miss Taylor silenced her with this canny observation: "The greatest love scenes are played FREE from physical contact. Shakespeare realized it, and the two greatest lovers in the world played a scene, the acme of tenderness, on the balcony and the ground, respectively. I'm sorry that I can't agree with the stage manager, that a love scene must be a blurred mass of defiance and actual wrestling between two people" . . . Get the Frohman autobiography . . . It is grand reading.

Harry and Abe Warner top the stage and screen contributors to the Jewish Federation funds . . . They gave $11,000 . . . Other contributors include: Dave Bernstein, $5,000; Eddie Cantor, $3,250 . . . Irving Berlin, $2,500; Phil Baker, $1,500; Ben Bernie, $3,000 . . . Eddy Duchin, $500; Abe Lastvogel, $1,000; Jules Brulatour, $1,500; Sid Silverman, $1,000; Joe Cooper, $2,000; Jack (Columbia) Cohn, $2,500; Jack Curtis, $500; Robbins Music, $1,000; Buddy Morris, $2,000; Belle Baker, $500; Edie Garr, $100; Sam Lyons, $250 . . . One of the big officials of the federation explained to me why it is that this annual drive for charity funds is waged with such vigor . . . The Jews, when they first arrived in this country, were compelled to sign documents to this effect: That their leaders must guarantee that none of them would become public charges—or else.

Thelma Todd's tragic death shocked Broadway, because she was the gayest of the Coast sprites . . . The last time she returned from Europe, she wagered that she could smuggle in five bottles of whisky, then taboo . . . Under a mink coat, she donned a Cleopatra costume and strapped the bottles to her . . . The bulging costume attracted the customs man assigned to the "T" section . . . "What have you got inside that coat?" he thundered . . . The movie eyeful opened the coat and the amazed inspector took one quick peek and said: "Go home and put more clothes on" . . . So Miss Todd won her bet, and that night toasted Cleopatra in the smuggled liquor.

Rarest of all autographs of public celebs is that of Will Rogers . . . Rogers rarely signed his name in pen and ink to letters, preferring to typewrite it . . .

Father Eugene J. Callahan, of St. Gregory's R. C. Church and assistant director of the New York Union of the Holy Name Society, representing 2,000,000 members . . . Urges the stage to beware of the cheap profanity and vulgarity which has degraded the Broadway scene this season . . . He traces the foul mouth of the theater to the production of "What Price Glory" in 1926 . . . He protested then, from the pupit of St. Patrick's, that if the lines in "What Price Glory" were not bridled that "this new candor" would lead off into various trails of shocking speech . . . The above is part of his speech on "Reverence," delivered December 15 over the Columbia Broadcasting System for Church of the Air . . . To avoid the counter-attacks of those who will cry him down because his criticism is that of a cleric or preacher, Father Callahan quotes from George Jean Nathan, Brooks Atkinson and this column to prove that his is not a lone voice in the wilderness.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

PER diem and hourly employes are anxiously awaiting an interpretation of the executive order providing for a half holiday December 24 and December 31.

BAKER.

The first sentence of the order appears to be clear enough, but some question of its legality has arisen in regard to per diem and hourly employes. The order provides that "all" employes in the Federal service in the District and in the field service of the Executive Departments . . . except those who may, for special reasons, be excluded . . . by the heads of their respective departments . . . or those whose absence from duty would be inconsistent with the provisions of existing law, "are hereby excused from duty at 1 p. m. on Tuesday, December 24 and at 1 p. m. on Tuesday, December 31."

Where employes work shifts, it is provided that they may be excused from duty after four hours' work and shifts be arranged accordingly.

"We will pay our per diem and hourly employes if legally possible and I am confident legal means will be found to do so," William H. McReynolds, administrative assistant to Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, said last night.

"We have no intention of discriminating against an employe because he or she may be a per diem or hourly worker," McReynolds emphasized.

The bulk of the Treasury per diem employes are at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

Treasury Department usually sets the example in these matters and whatever action is taken on the holiday is expected to be followed by other departments and agencies in the executive branch of the Government.

The Navy Yard and Government Printing Office are specifically directed in the order to close at 1 p. m. on Christmas Eve and New Year's Eve.

B. J. Wrightsman Retires.

Friends of Benjamin J. Wrightsman (F), at Adjutant General's Office, War Department, bade him farewell this week as he started on final leave status before his retirement, December 31, after 43 years' service in that office. For more than 20 years he was in charge of the military prisoners' section.

Mr. Wrightsman is a native of the Ozark Mountains of Missouri. He and Mrs. Wrightsman reside at 120 Bryant street northwest.

In a brief talk, Brig. Gen. E. T. Conley, acting adjutant general, spoke in highly complimentary terms of Mr. Wrightsman's long service.

Having learned of a contemplated trip by Mr. and Mrs. Wrightsman through the West during the coming spring, his office associates presented him with a handsome traveling bag, accompanied by a kindly worded memorial.

Inspectors of the Bureau of Animal Industry applied more than $25,000,000 tuberculin tests during the past year in the Federal-State campaign to eradicate bovine tuberculosis, says Dr. John R. Mohler, bureau chief. As a result of the tests, more than 376,000 tuberculous animals were detected and removed from herds.

Patent Office Resignations.

Two resignations are reported at Patent Office, as follows:

Edward W. E. Kamm, who holds a B. S. and M. E. from Purdue University, will enter the patent department of the du Pont de Neat Fort Wayne, Ind.

Lynn Morris, examiner, has accepted a position in the patent department of the Du Pont de Nemours Co. He will be stationed in Washington.

Employe Leader Returns.

E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, returned to Washington yesterday from Chicago, where he attended the convention of State, county and city employes who are affiliating with the federation. Mr. Babcock stopped in Detroit en route back to the Capital and spoke at a joint meeting of the Detroit A. F. G. E. lodges Monday night.

The employe leader's subject at the Detroit meeting was the economy drive now in prospect.

"Only through organization," he said, "can Government employes protect themselves from the attacks now shaping up."

Officials Speak Tonight.

Sumner Wells, Assistant Secretary of State, will address the meeting of the Young Men's Democratic Club of Prince Georges County, Md., tonight at Masonic Hall, Hyattsville.

Dr. Edgar B. Broussard, United States Tariff Commissioner, will give an address at the Y. M. C. A. at 8:15 p. m. today on "The Changing World and Its Effect on Personality."

Government Manual.

Q. Where can I obtain a copy of the United States Government Manual?—Marston L. Kates (P).

A. From the United States Information Service at 1423 F street northwest. The 1936 edition of the manual will be ready for distribution on January 1, 1936. This publication supersedes the present edition and will provide factual information describing the creation and authority, organization, and activity of all executive units of the Federal Government, authenticated by the heads of the departments. Organization charts are also included.

Under a ruling of the Comptroller General the price of the manual for general distribution has been set at $2, including revisions and additions to the end of the calendar year. A certain number will be available for free distribution to Government officials and agencies.

Aid Toward Recovery.

Q. How much is spent by the Government now on rivers and harbors and flood control?—Jacob L. Newkirk (P).

A. During the fiscal year ended June 30 last, $201,240,177 was spent for such work, providing direct employment to 79,500 persons and indirect employment to about 200,000 more. Secretary of War George H. Dern in his latest report praises the Army Engineer Corps for the rivers and habors improvement and flood control activities as a substantial aid toward economic recovery.

"THE CHEAPEST TO OPERATE OF ANY TRUCKS WE EVER OWNED"
—says Rosslyn, Va., Truck Owner

Ford Motor Co.,
Alexandria, Va.

Gentlemen:

We know from previous experience with Ford Trucks that they are powerful, strongly built, and the cheapest to operate of any trucks we have ever owned. But we have been amazed at the work the 1935 Ford V-8 can do.

For example, our semi-trailer job hauls an average of 20,000 pounds of bituminous coal from Barton, Md. to Washington, D.C. This truck makes the round trip of 320 miles in 12 hours elapsed time.

Very truly yours,
J. W. BARTON, Gen. Manager,
Washington Fuel & Supply Co.,
Rosslyn, Va.

Now try this even greater 1936 Ford V-8 Truck ON YOUR JOB

THOUSANDS of truck owners have already proved that Ford V-8 performance is something every truck owner should know for himself. High all-round standards of performance, with new standards of low all-round cost, have put this truck in a class by itself. Today, test Ford V-8 value—at its greatest in the 1936 truck—over your routes, with your loads and driver. No obligation—ask your Ford dealer.

Fairfax Board Urges Changes In Liquor Law

Would Give All Profits From Sale to State's School Fund.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Alexandria 43-F-31.

The school board of Fairfax County (Va.) yesterday adopted a resolution urging the State assembly to change the State liquor law so that all profits derived from the sale of liquor by the State dispensary system be turned over to the State school fund.

Under the present system these funds are divided between the State and the various local jurisdictions throughout the State.

During a conference with State Senator John W. Rust the school board urged that changes be made in the various State school laws. Among these was the request to increase the limit of the amount that can be obtained by the county from the State literary fund to $50,000 for each project. Under the present law the limit is $25,000.

The board asked that the State school appropriation be increased so that the minimum State allowance for teachers' salaries to each locality will be $720. Under the present law the State contribution to local teachers' salaries is about $430.

A change in the salary and allowances of the school board members also was recommended. Under the present law, a school board member receives $5 for each board meeting, with a maximum of 20 meetings a year. It was asked that the school board be paid on the same basis as the county board of supervisors, which allows 24 meetings a year, mileage from their homes to the county courthouse and pay for committee meetings.

An effort will be made to secure a rebate of the State gasoline tax paid on gasoline used in the county school buses. Under the present law, the county pays a State tax on all gasoline used for county business.

Other requests included those for changes in the traffic laws to compel motorists to stop behind school buses which are loading or unloading pupils, and for appointment of the county superintendent of schools by the State Board of Education instead of by the Governor.

The Young Democrats Club of Fairfax County, Va., has unanimously re-elected Franklin S. Gicker, jr., of McLean, as president. Other officers elected were John Ferguson, vice president for Centreville and Dranesville District; Mrs. Herbert Haar, vice president for Lee and Mount Vernon District and Lewis Coyner, vice president for Falls Church and Providence districts. Mrs. Mildred Mackall, of McLean, secretary, and W. Lewis Leigh, of Fairfax, treasurer.

Chairmen of the six magisterial districts elected were: James C. King, Centerville district; Holmes K. Stroud, Dranesville district; Edward M. Jones, Falls Church district; Mrs. J. E. Staub, Lee district; Earl Popkins, Mount Vernon district, and Mrs. John H. Ruff, Providence district.

To co-operate with the Young Democratic groups in nearby towns and counties in any interclub activities, a committee consisting of Charles Pickett, chairman; John C. MacKall, Judge Paul E. Brown, C. Pembroke Pettit, Joseph Patterson, jr., James C. King and Edward M. Jones was appointed to represent the Fairfax club.

Plans were discussed for the Jackson day dinner of the club to be held in the Herndon High School on January 8. A committee consisting of James C. King, Walter Tansill Oliver, jr., Stanley Hanes and W. Lewis Leigh was appointed to take charge of the arrangements.

F. W. Richardson, retiring county clerk, will be the honor guest of the club at the dinner, when he will be presented with a tribute from the club for his 55 years of service as clerk of the county.

J. Fred Oertel has been elected master of the Concord Masonic Lodge of Vienna, Va. He has served as secretary of the lodge for 14 years. Other officers elected were M. A. Moreland, senior warden; A. M. Brandt, junior warden; E. T. Bennett, treasurer; William F. Morian, secretary; Arthur W. Harkness, senior deacon, and George F. Miles, junior deacon. The appointed officers of the lodge will be named at the January meeting.

A Christmas pageant, "The Babe of Bethlehem," written by students of the Lee Jackson High School, will be presented tonight in the school auditorium by the Glee Club and Dramatic Club of the school. The pageant was prepared by the following students: Marjorie Ellsworth, Vivian Long, Mary Jane Fitzgerald, Harriet Griffiths, Myrtle Oliver, Virginia Lee and Stella Dixon.

Those taking the leading parts include: Mildred Cobb, Paige Crandall, James Sipes, James Lewis, Warren Fletcher, Harry Leake, Peter Drury, James Lowe, Paul Herfurth, Naomi Ellsworth, Charles Lynch, Charles Moltz, Hunter Radcliffe, Anita Herndon, Ann Scutt, Elizabeth Cragg, Mary Jane Fitzgerald, Marjorie Ellsworth, Margaret Brewer, Vivian Long, Elaine Dunn, Harriett Griffiths and Marjorie Clapp.

Women Appear Before Board at Richmond, But Chairman Says Test of Conditions Will Be Made; Equipment Reaches Clarendon.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Clarendon, Va. Telephone Clarendon 509.

Supporting the stand taken by ministers of the county and the county board, a delegation representing the Arlington County Woman's Temperance Union filed their protest to the Alcohol Beverage Control Board at Richmond yesterday.

County Manager Roy S. Braden, who went to Richmond on Wednesday to express the county board's opposition to the establishment of a liquor store in Clarendon, said T. Mc. C. Frazier, chairman of the board, told him the store would be opened on Friday, despite protests, "to prove conditions in the county."

A board investigation was said to have revealed quantities of bootleg liquor of an inferior grade were being brought across the Potomac into the county.

The State moved equipment into the store yesterday and it was being set up last night. State officers said four truck loads of liquor would be unloaded today.

Gilbert L. Hall was unanimously re-elected president of the Arlington Hospital Association at its annual meeting held at the courthouse yesterday.

Other officers elected are Carlton K. Lewis, vice president; Miss Constance Backus, secretary, and Wiley M. Fuller, treasurer. Members of the board of trustees to serve a term of three years are William A. Coates, Louis C. Carl, J. C. Connor, Miss Maude Jones, Mrs. Carrie Gibson, Mrs. Cora E. Miles, Mrs. Azile Haley, Mrs. Gertrude Lynch, Mrs. Julia Thomas. Members of the executive committee are Mrs. Joseph C. Boss, Carlton K. Lewis, Louis C. Carl and Mr. Hall.

The finance committee consists of Ashton C. Jones, sr., James C. Connor and William A. Coates; auditing committee—William C. Hull, J. C. McClellan and Walter U. Varney.

President Hall announces the receipt of a contribution of $15 from Job's Daughters, Bethel No. 1, of Clarendon.

The Arlington County Volunteer Firemen's Association meeting at Falls Church firehouse last night re-elected John R. Malloch, of Ballston, as president. Other officers are Elmer J. Blackmer, jr., of Arlington, secretary-treasurer; A. C. Schaeffel, of Arlington, fire marshal, and Edwin B. Chapman, of Cherrydale, relief fund treasurer.

The following members were selected to constitute the auditing committee:

George F. Cook, Arthur C. Stickley 2d, and Wililam D. Topley, to audit the treasurer's accounts, and Charles B. Austin, Benjamin F. Elliott and W. P. Devine, the relief fund account.

The association voted to hold its annual memorial services at the Calvary Methodist Protestant Church at Aurora Hills on January 12.

The Arlington Rotary Club will hold its luncheon meeting today at 12:30 p. m. at the Washington Golf and Country Club.

The Jefferson District community Christmas tree committee reports that the program for the community celebration, which will take place on the Nellie Custis School grounds, will start promptly at 7 p. m. on Christmas Eve and continue for one-half hour. The Girl and Boy Scouts will assist in the distribution of the leaflets for the singing.

All residents are requested to plan Christmas tree decorations on the fronts of their homes, as a prize will be awarded to the best-decorated tree.

The judges will make the inspection on Friday night, December 27, between 8 and 10 p. m.

The committee in charge of the arrangements is headed by Frank T. Tracey, general chairman. Other members of the committe are Horace M. Woodward, Miss M. E. Thomas, the Rev. Thomas G. Betschler, D. E. Wentzel and William K. MacMahon.

ulty member, and will include Christmas carols and other music.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the Groveton School will meet tonight in the auditorium of the school. The pupils of the school will give a special Christmas entertainment.

Herndon Masonic Lodge, No. 264, has elected the following officers: Worshipful master, E. M. Armfield; senior warden, Harry M. Middleton; junior warden, Philip C. Weinberg; treasurer, George A. Brady; secretary, Fred W. Robinson; senior deacon, E. Russell Gillette; junior deacon, Welby Nalles. The master, E. M. Armfield, was installed at this meeting. Other officers will be installed on the first Monday night in January. Worshipful master appointed Allen H. Kirk and Edgar E. Gillette a committee to audit the treasurer's books. The past master's degree will be conferred on junior warden elect, Philip Wienberg, on Monday night, December 23.

Maryland to Bear Pension Burden

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 18.—In an effort to expedite the release of State old-age pension funds, State Comptroller William S. Gordy, jr., today notified county commissioners throughout Maryland that the State was ready to reimburse the counties and Baltimore City two-thirds of the funds expended by them for old-age pensions.

Political subdivisions of the State, under the aged plan, must first provide funds, certifying to the State Board of Aid and Charities their expenditures. The State then reimburses the counties two-thirds of the money expended on a monthly basis.

The comptroller today approved the appointment of Joseph H. Griscom, of Eastport, as secretary to the board of liquor license commissioners of Anne Arundel County, with a $1,500 annual salary. Thomas J. Cullimore, chairman of the board of county commissioners, had asked for Gordy's official sanction necessitated by law.

Couple Cleared Of Jaywalking At Alexandria

But Husband Is Fined for Contempt; Zell Liquor Defendants Bonded.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Judge James Reese Duncan, of civil and police court, yesterday dismissed charges of jaywalking brought against an Alexandria couple, but fined the man $5 and costs for contempt of court.

The jaywalking charge was against Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Dailey. It was made Saturday night on King street by Pvt. J. C. Shaw, who said the pair ignored his warning and that he then gave them a summons.

It was Dailey's attitude in court which led Judge Duncan to fine him $5 and costs of $4.25 for contempt. The Daileys live at 130 Wyatt avenue, they informed police.

The George Washington Birthday Association of Alexandria held a brief meeting last night with Harry F. Kennedy, executive vice president, presiding. It was decided to adjourn until January 6, when tentative plans for a celebration February 22 will be drawn up.

Judge William W. Woolls, in Corporation Court, has handed down a decision in the case known as Commonwealth vs. Nellie Zell, Charles Zell and Earl Treger.

The judge, in part, said:

"This is a case, under the evidence, in which the law of the State of Virginia must either be carried out, or declared meaningless and just so many words. The people of the United States and particularly of Virginia, after adopting and living under prohibition for nearly 20 years, have indicated the manner in which liquor might and could be obtained; and the people through their State officers have said it must be obtained from the State liquor stores."

He then enumerated the penalties for violation of this law, and as the persons in question were proved to have violated the State liquor laws, the place at Princess and Henry streets was ordered padlocked, or a $2,000 bond given to insure said premises not being used for unlawful purposes for five years.

"Huckleberry Finn" will be presented tonight in the auditorium of the new George Washington High School, under the direction of Miss Nora Hossley.

The Rev. O. W. Brittingham, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, will speak before the Alexandria Kiwanis Club at 12:30 p. m. today, in the George Mason Hotel. His talk will be on the Christmas season, and the musical program will be appropriate to the occasion.

Irving S. Foltz has been re-elected president of Engine Company, No. 5, with the following other officers: C. K. Ebhardt, first vice president; G. S. Duffey, secretary; K. W. Smith, assistant secretary; R. W. Gorham, first lieutenant; S. W. Tyler, second lieutenant; L. Sutton, commander of hose.

Democrats Rake Fusion Rule In Montgomery on Six Counts

MONTGOMERY COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
1111 Oak Avenue, Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone, Shepherd 2363.

Montgomery County's Fusionist government was assailed on six charges, including extravagance and political favoritism, by the Young Men's Democratic Club of Bethesda last night.

About 75 members of the club met in the home of T. Ormonde Nichols and drafted a resolution condemning Fusion government on the following counts:

That the tax rate has been unnecessarily raised 60 cents on each $100.

Fusion county commissioners tried to dodge responsibility for a $850,000 school bond issue after requesting the State Legislature to authorize it.

The commissioners allotted 85 per cent of the road program to a section of the county that pays only 20 per cent of the taxes.

Assessments have been reduced for "certain Fusion leaders."

The Fusion economy platform has been disregarded.

A number of commissions have been unnecessarily appointed, further increasing the tax burden.

The meeting was attended by a number of Democratic Club officials, including James W. Cummings, president of the United Young Democratic Clubs of Montgomery County; Charles Davis, president of the Poolesville Club; J. S. Dawson, jr., president of the Rockville Club, and A. D. Noyes, president of the Kensington Club.

Russell Baker, Rockville garage employe, was acquitted yesterday on charges of failing to stop and render assistance after an accident in a hearing before Judge Harold C. Smith in Montgomery County Police Court at Rockville.

Baker was accused of having struck James Magruder, 55, colored, of Quince Orchard, November 3. After hearing the State testimony, Judge Smith held that the State had not made a case against Baker and dismissed the charges without calling any defense witnesses.

Montgomery County police last night continued special vigilance ordered by Sergts. Roy Snyder and Earl Burdine, of the Bethesda substation, following a series of robberies in fashionable Chevy Chase reported Tuesday.

Only one report reached the police for Tuesday night. Mrs. Roy W. Kelly, 402 Elm street, Chevy Chase, reported she and her maid saw a man on the back porch of a neighboring residence and had called to him to ask who he was. "I am a stranger," the man replied as he left.

Four homes had been robbed the previous night with a total of $1,000 in jewelry and nearly $400 in cash as the loot.

The Montgomery County Civic Federation is investigating the need for more policemen.

The eleventh anniversary of the organization of Silver Spring Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, was celebrated last night in the Masonic Temple at Silver Spring. Past matrons and past patrons were guests of honor. New officers are Mrs. Harry McComas, worthy matron; Warner E. Pumphrey, worthy patron; Mrs. Dorsey Jones, associate matron; Joseph Griffith, associate patron; Miss Alice Gladmon, secretary; Miss Ethel Wilkinson, treasurer; Mrs. Mary Marsden, conductress; Mrs. Charles Jones, associate conductress.

Curtailment of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration program has reduced the staff of the Montgomery County Welfare Board, according to Miss Dorothy A. Everson, executive secretary.

Miss Everson announced yesterday the closing of the board's office in Silver Spring and the division of the county into four districts, with one visitor responsible for each district. Applications for assistance will be received at the main office in Rockville Mondays and Thursdays, from 9 a. m. to 12 m., she said.

A Christmas beautification contest was voted by the Sligo Park Hills Citizens Association at a meeting in Jessup Blair Community Hall, Silver Spring.

It was voted to give an award to the resident having the prettiest lighting display. A special Christmas decoration committee was appointed by E. Francis McDevitt, vice president, consisting of Henry T. Porter, chairman; Mrs. E. K. Nelson, Mrs. I. A. Denison and George B. Webster.

Paving of the road from Dale drive to the Montgomery Blair High School was urged by Henry T. Porter.

The Potomac Valley Citizens Association at a meeting last night in the home of Mrs. N. M. Burgess, Broad street, appointed a co-ordinating committee to meet with the Brookmont League committee. Members of the new committee are C. L. Abernathy, Samuel Hamilton, Ray Watkins, Alan Davis and N. M. Burgess.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. today at Williamsport, Md., for Mrs. Mary Stickel, 85, of Glen Echo Heights, Md., who died Monday. Mrs. Stickels was born at Williamsport.

Gen. Gomez, 78, Long Venezuela Dictator, Dead

26 Years of Iron Rule Ends for President; Funeral Set for Today.

Caracas, Venezuela, Dec. 19 (AP). Firm-handed Gen. Juan Vincente Gomez, who established a dictatorship in Venezuela long before the word became well known in Europe, died last night—still the boss of his country, despite his 78 years.

An old malady caused the President's death, announcement of which was withheld until today.

Gen. Gomez, who seized power through a revolution in 1908, when President Cipriano Castro was in Europe, and held it with a strong hand, had one of the most colorful careers of modern politics.

Guns Boom in Honor.

Hastily going into session, the cabinet elected Gen. Eleazar Lopez Contreras, minister of war, as provisional President. He will serve until Congress elects a successor to Gomez.

Venezuela was reported calm tonight as guns of the army boomed every half-hour in tribute to the dictator. He will be buried tomorrow morning, on the anniversary of his assumption of the Presidency.

By a strange coincidence, Gomez's birth and death offer parallels to those of Simon Bolivar, great South American patriot, who led what are now Venezuela, Colombia, Ecuador, Panama, Peru and Bolivia to independence from Spain. Both were born on July 24. Bolivar died in 1830 and last night Gomez died at the same minute, same hour and on the same day of the month—December 17. Bolivar is buried in Caracas.

Leads Nation to Prosperity.

Among Gomez's greatest contributions to Venezuela were the establishment of friendly relations with foreign nations—in contrast to previous regimes—and the development of the nation's economic resources.

Under him the Venezuelan petroleum industry grew until it now holds third rank in the world. He pushed through legislation allowing foreign corporations to exploit the country's natural resources but at the same time protected the nation's interests.

Gomez had a simple manner, was cordial and shunned formality. Always industrious, he began work at 6 a. m. One of his favorite diversions was motoring to haciendas of old friends to enjoy wine and conversation.

During his rule several attempts were made by revolutionists to overthrow Gomez, but they were all vigorously suppressed.

Revolt Seen Averted.

Port of Spain, Trinidad, Dec. 18 (AP).—Trinidad observers said tonight they believed civil war for the control of the Venezuelan government had been averted by War Minister Lopez Contreras' assumption of power on the death of Juan Vicente Gomez, 78-year-old dictator.

Private advices reaching Venezuelan expatriates in Trinidad said the appointment of Contreras as provisional President, backed by the national cabinet, had staved off "gravest danger" of bloodshed over the dictatorship wielded by Gomez.

Among the 1,000 or more Venezuelans here—exiles from the Gomez regime—the appointment was regarded as a coup d'etat to keep the present ministry in power. Though some members of the cabinet have presidential ambitions, they were represented as putting personal feelings aside to back up Contreas and present a united front against forces outside the cabinet.

Rodney Rose Dies; Former Zoo Man

Rodney Rose, 76, who worked in the lion house at the Washington Zoo for 30 years without having a single argument with the king of beasts, died late Tuesday at his home, 114 Seventh street northeast, of a cerebral hemmorhage.

Although he never got so much as a scratch from his charges, he did get mixed up about ten years ago with a copperhead snake. The reptile bit him on the middle finger of his left hand. Rose rushed into the lion house, grabbed the cleaver with which he chopped up meat for his animals, and severed the poisoned finger. He retired from the Zoo nine years ago.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Annie Rose, and several stepchildren. Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. today at Chambers Southeast funeral home. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Dr. A. L. Baylor, Famed Woman Educator, Dies

Made Midwest Reputation Before Taking Post With Government.

Dr. Adelaide Steele Baylor, 70, one of the most widely known women educators in the United States, died last night in Emergency Hospital. She had been ill for more than a month.

For more than 12 years she was chief of the home economics education service, vocational education division in the United States Office of Education. From 1918 to her retirement last October, she had been in the service of the Federal Government.

For many years she was associated with a movement for the establishment of vocational education in home economics throughout the United States, Hawaii and Puerto Rico, and was widely accredited with the success of the program.

Dr. Baylor had made a reputation as an educator in the Middle West before entering the Federal service. For the seven years prior to 1910 she was a teacher in the public schools of Wabash, Ind. During the four years immediately following she was superintendent of schools in Wabash.

Gets State Job.

From 1911 to 1914 she held the position of assistant superintendent of public instruction in Indiana and subsequently was named the State supervisor of home economics. She was nominated for the post of superintendent of public instruction, the only woman ever to have received that honor, but she withdrew her name as she had already accepted a Government appointment.

Outside the Government, Dr. Baylor's ranking among members of her profession was of the highest. As early as 1904 she had held the presidency of the City and County Superintendents Association, of which she was then the only woman member. Since 1917 she had been the secretary of the National Council of Education.

She was president of the elementary section of the National Education Association, and in 1916 and 1917 headed the National Council of Administrative Women in Education. Her memberships in professional organizations also included the governing board of the National Parent-Teacher Association, League of American Pen Women and the Association of University Women.

She was the author of several children's books and reading texts widely used in the Nation's elementary schools. She also was a frequent contributor to periodicals and a lecturer on educational subjects.

Opening of Calvert St. Bridge Tonight to Be Colorful Event

Parade, Concert, Speakers and Dances on Program; Builder Will Attend.

Washington's newest monument to progress—the $1,175,000 Calvert Street Bridge—will be opened tonight with a civic celebration.

There will be a parade, street dancing, music and speech-making as the first official automobiles roll across the stately concrete span towering above Rock Creek Park.

The parade, including military, civic, school and patriotic units, will move at 7 p. m. from the formation area at Florida avenue and V street northwest.

Countless floats will share the attention of cheering throngs as the procession winds its way along V, Eighteenth and Calvert streets, Connecticut avenue and Woodley road, to Cathedral avenue.

Parade Participants.

An outstanding group of marchers, representing the Building Trades Council, will include the men who actually built the bridge.

Col. John W. Oelmann, of the District National Guard, will be grand marshal.

Groups in line will include Maj. E. W. Brown and other police officials; George C. Shinn, general chairman, and members of the dedication committee; the Army Band, the District Commissioners, the District National Guard, Washington high school cadets, Boy Scouts, the American Legion, the Police Department Boys' Club Band, Veterans of Foreign Wars Band and Drum Corps, Washington Gas Light Co. Band, Vincent B. Costello American Legion Band, Cleveland Park and Connecticut Avenue Business Men's Associations.

When the parade reaches the bridge it will pause for the cutting of a white ribbon barrier by two 5-year-old girls, Geraldine Clark, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Howard F. Clark, and Anne Laser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer C. Laser.

Formal Presentation.

The Navy Band will add the martial touch of the occasion with a preliminary concert in Rock Creek Park.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District highway director, will turn the bridge over to the community. It will be accepted by Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen, George E. Allen and Dan I. Sultan.

Chairman Shinn then will introduce the chief speaker, Senator Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma, who voted for the funds as a member of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Another event will be the playing of "The Calvert Street March" by the Washington High School Cadet Corps Band. The air was written by Marie Gay Owen, 14-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude W. Owen.

A Russian dance will be presented by Neighborhood House girls, the Highland fling by girls of the Christ Child Society and a Japanese dance and tango by Friendship House girls.

Southeast Files Protest.

Among the spectators will be John W. Cowper, Washington and Buffalo contractor, who put the old bridge on rollers, moved it 80 feet down the valley and opened it for traffic 48 hours later before building a new structure.

Meanwhile, Clarence F. Donohoe, Southeast Business Men's Association president, in a letter to the Commissioners, protested that opening of the Calvert Street Bridge proved his section has been "discriminated against."

He urged replacement of the "inadequate and obsolete" Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge across Eastern Branch of the Anatcostia River, built in 1890.

The Southeast, he continued, pays 15 per cent of the District's tax revenue and receives only 3 per cent for public improvements.

Super-Highway On W.B.A. Line Is Parley Topic

Prince Georges Officers to Urge Proposal on State Road Board.

A conference between the Prince Georges County (Md.) board of commissioners and the State roads commission is slated today in Baltimore regarding the proposed conversion of the abandoned Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis electric line into a super-highway.

The commissioners also will confer with the roads commission on the county deficit in roads funds, which for Prince Georges County amounts to approximately $36,000. Officials of other counties likewise will discuss their roads deficits with the commission.

Need of an additional highway between Washington and Baltimore to relieve the traffic on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard will be pointed out to the State officials. Owners of the assets of the W., B. & A., represented by a bondholders' committee, have offered to sell the 60-foot right-of-way at a price which the county commissioners term "reasonable."

The project has been recommended by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, according to a letter received from Irving C. Root, chief engineer.

A request from Secretary of the Navy Swanson that the county commissioners improve about 2 miles of private road leading from the Clinton-Woodyard road to the property recently acquired by the Navy for a radio station was rejected. It was held the commissioners had no authority to use funds on private roads.

Society Out En Masse For Morning Musicale

Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Taft Among Guests at Mayflower Event; Soprano and Violinist Appear.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Washington society turned out en masse yesterday to attend the first of the series of Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's morning musicales at the Mayflower. These musicales in the last few years have become outstanding musical events for society, and yesterday, three "First Ladies" were present at the concert which was given by Mme. Kirsten Flagstad, Norwegian soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, and Mr. Roman Totenberg, young Polish violinist.

Mrs. Townsend, wearing a gown of black velvet with a turban trimmed with black paradise feathers, greeted her friends on all sides. Mrs. Roosevelt was present in a box, having as her guests Senora de Espil, wife of the Argentina Ambassador; Mme. de Laboulaye, wife of the French Ambassador; Mrs. Henry A. Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury; Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General, and Mrs. Warner Justen, sister of Mrs. Morgenthau.

The other two "First Ladies" present were Mrs. William Howard Taft and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, who have been among those attending Mrs. Townsend's musicales since their beginning.

Following her usual custom, Mrs. Townsend entertained at a luncheon after the musicale, when her guests of honor were the artists of the day. The luncheon was served at a table decorated with masses of poinsettia and tiny illuminated Christmas trees.

Among other guests were the Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom, the Minister of Denmark and Mme. Wadsted, the Minister of Norway and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, the Charge d'Affaires of Poland and Mme. Sokolowska, Baron Johan Beck-Friis, Counselor of the Legation of Sweden, and Baroness Beck-Friis; the Counselor of the Hungarian Legation, Mr. Anthony de Balasy; Mr. Edward Kulikowski and Mr. Edward Weinthal of the Polish Embassy staff, and Mr. Ramon Padilla, Second Secretary of the Spanish Embassy.

Many Others Present.

Others present were Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, Baroness Fabian Tamm, Mrs. Tracy Dows and her daughter, Mrs. John L. Burling; Mrs. Matthew Whittall, Commander and Mrs. Ralph Stewart, Miss Beatrice Phillips, Miss Helen Lee Doherty, Miss Jane Thorpe, Mr. Henry Johansen, Miss Elsie Illingworth, Mr. Clarence Hewes, Mr. Edwin McArthur, Mr. Arpad Sandor, Mr. Olin Dowe and Mr. Wyant P. Johnston.

The Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Sao-Ke Alfred Sze, was ranking guest at the luncheon given yesterday at the Mayflower by Dr. and Mrs. William Jennings Price. The company also included the Minister of Venezuela, Dr. Pedro Manuel Arcaya; the Minister of Panama, Dr. Ricardo J. Alfaro, and Senator Joseph Guffey, of Pennsylvania.

Also Mr. and Mrs. Louis S. Cowsley, Maj. Sanderson Detwiler, of Lancaster, Pa.; Mrs. Emerson Howe, Mrs. Browder Lynch, Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, Mrs. Edgar Snow and Mme. Teresa Alcaide.

Mrs. Cabot Stevens entertained at a large luncheon in honor of Mrs. Taft and Senora de Alfaro, wife of the Minister of Panama. The latter was absent because of illness which has prevented her appearance at functions for the past week.

On Monday night the Minister of Panama and Senora de Alfaro will entertain at the outstanding dance of the season, which they will give in the Pan-American Union in honor of their debutante daughter, Senorita Amelita Alfaro. Senora de Alfaro is sending cards of admission to the ball on receipt of responses to the invitations and up to date numerous guests have not answered. The list for the ball is closed and Senorita de Alfaro is anxious that everybody receive their cards before Monday.

Other Guests Listed.

Mrs. Stevens' other guests yesterday included Senora Castillo Najera, wife of the Ambassador of Mexico; Mrs. William E. Borah, wife of Senator Borah; Mrs. Harry Woodring, wife of the Acting Secretary of War; Mme. Adults Enthuse Over Modern Christmas Toys

Ingenious Trinkets Now on Display Are Treat to Old and Young.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IT WOULD be hard to find, even in the realm of your imagination, more delightful toys and trinkets than those offered this season. Trips through toylands are treats for children and strangely interesting to adults too. In fact, as one visitor announced the other day—and he was a man of 40 or thereabouts—"It's seeing these amazingly ingenious things of today that makes me feel I kind of lost out when I was a kid."

It's not just the larger and more expensive toys and other items that arouse adult enthusiasm. Lots of times some small, modestly-priced gadget is equally significant of the ingenuity that has gone into this field of designing. For instance, the bow-wow set. Terribly amusing! It consists of a pair of children's bedroom slippers made of warm lamb's wool, and a dog to match.

The slippers, quaintly enough, have little rabbit's ears, eyes, and nose. They come pale blue, pink and white. Only $1.50 for the set.

Leather Sewing Roll.

JUST ONE QUARTER will buy some little lady a nice little something to hang on the Christmas tree for mother. It's a leather sewing roll containing two spools of thread, a thimble, and a grand assortment of pins and needles.

One of these rolls will fit easily into your pocketbook and be on hand for any emergency. And, it goes without saying what handy things they are to keep conveniently close for ripping emergencies.

They're available in at least a half a dozen colors.

Scottie Bedroom Lamps.

ATTRACTIVE as can be for a child's bedroom or nursery are the little Scottie lamps in the notions department of a downtown store. The shades in a light tan are plain and so are the lamp bases except for the figure of the Scottie perched there as though standing guard.

It's hard to realize that these bear a humble price tag reading $1.95. They look as though they'd make an impressive dent in any budget.

For the Yule Egg-Nog.

HURRAH for the 1936-model punch bowl! What a festive affair to serve from! It's made of chromium and shaped—believe it or not—like Humpty Dumpty's ancestor, the egg. Contributing to its charm are a lid and generous ladle decorated with bright red knobs. Furthermore there are 12 red glasses arranged on a ledge around the middle.

For your Christmas egg-nog parties what could be more appropriate?

Bags for Wanderers.

ALL PRIMED to give you the wanderlust are the tourist bags extraordinary shown in a downtown store. These are little leather cases, square shaped with a large mirror in the top. On the top tray there are three bottles, two jars and a comb. Beneath is space for your nightie, toothbrush, etc.

Whether you travel by motor, by train, or plane it's perfectly grand to have such a modern knapsack to carry the little things for you.

Those of you who are still doing your Christmas shopping are bound to realize that here's the ideal gift for some gadabout friend.

Chic Leather Gloves.

CHIC to their very fingertips are the dapper gloves in an F street store. They are combinations of suede and capeskin in contrasting shades. You may buy them in green and brown, red and brown, brown and tan, black and red, and two soft lovely tones of gray.

Contributing to the undisputed charm of these gay gloves are narrow wristbands insuring a snug fit and giving that dash of sportiness quite in keeping with their dapper styling.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 323, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Babies Become Builders When Santa Claus Brings Blocks

A nest of blocks stack up into a swell "skyscraper" out at the National Child Research Center. When it's finished, the children can make it topple and build another, or they can turn to the train with cars that lock into each other and carry loads of blocks or sand all over the place. Both types of toys are ideal for children from 18 months to five years of age.

Chinese Food Pleasing Change On Dinner Menu

Chicken Chow Mein and Lai Yut Are Suggested Recipes for Today.

By Dorothea Duncan.

IF YOUR FAMILY is whole-heartedly in favor of Chinese food they will approve the dinner menu suggested for today. If you have little time to give the preparation of dinner you might plan to use already prepared chow mein and buy Chinese rice cakes. If, on the other hand, you are not overly busy with outside activities try the following recipes for chow mein and lai yut.

Chicken Chow Mein.

Cook ¼ pound noodles (thin string variety) in a quart of hot peanut oil until crisp, then drain them on absorbent paper.

Cut ½ pound pork or chicken and ½ pound lobster or veal into small pieces (leftover meats may be used), fry 5 minutes in frying pan, then let simmer in butter. Add well chopped vegetables — half bunch celery, 1 onion, ½ pound mushrooms and simmer until tender.

Place the noodles in bottom of flat dish, pour the meat and vegetable mixture over them, topping off with slivers of boiled or baked ham and yolks of hard-cooked eggs (optional).

Lai Yut.

Make a pasty dough, using rice flour. Roll out, brush it with whites of two beaten eggs. Fold dough over several times, each time brushing with egg. Then roll dough out again like cookie dough and cut into rounds.

Make a filling of 2 cups lychee nuts stoned and mashed to a pulp, 1½ cups sugar, 1 teaspoon mixed spices and 1 cup crystallized limes, all mixed. Put filling into the dough placed in tart shells. Bake in a hot oven (425-450 degrees F.) for ten minutes. Reduce heat to moderate (350 degrees F.) until filling is done.

MENUS FOR TODAY

Properly Chosen Christmas Toys Stimulate Initiative of Children

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WHAT SANTA CLAUS leaves under the Christmas tree or in the "stockings hung by the chimney with care" may be chiefly toys selected at the last minute by parents and other relatives who have been too busy buying gifts for grown-ups to think much about the youngsters.

Yet, if properly chosen, toys can stimulate a child's initiative and imagination, promote his activity, and educate as well as entertain him.

Anyway, that is the opinion of Mrs. Adelia Boynton Heiney, director of the nursery school at the National Child Research Center and an authority on the physical, mental and social development of preschool children.

Yesterday in her office, Mrs. Heiney gave a few important pointers on this business of buying suitable toys for youngsters ranging in age from 18 months to 5 years.

Rules for Selection.

First of all, she advises "careful consideration of the needs of the child when purchasing gifts for him at any time. Think of what the boy or girl already has," she said, "and select something that will supplement his collection. Then, too, choose toys a bit ahead of the child's activity so he can grow to them, thereby developing himself."

In this connection she discussed the "four tests for the suitability of toys."

1. Attractiveness. "Even thoughtless buyers generally take this into consideration," she said. "That's why so many children receive Christmas toys that are more ornamental than useful or entertaining."

2. Safety. "When buying for children under 5 avoid selecting trains, puzzles and peg boards with sharp points, tin toys, splintery blocks or those not colored with vegetable dye," she warned.

3. Durability. "Be sure the gift is sturdy enough to withstand any kind of treatment," she cautioned. "Fragile dolls, valuable ship models and expensive toy tea sets have no place in the nursery."

4. Variety of uses. "You can measure the educational value of almost any toy by this test," she emphasized. "Blocks, for example, have always been a suitable gift for younger children because blocks can be used in so many different ways—to build houses, stables, chairs, fences, 'skyscrapers,' and buildings of all kinds. Manufacturers are continually thinking up different types of blocks This year we have them in wagons, nests, boxes, sacks and even with holes in the middle so they can be strung as beads."

In the room containing the toy exhibit at the school, shelves are piled high with dolls of all types, stuffed animals, wheel toys, trains, puzzles and paints. But before she pointed out the advantage of each, Mrs. Heiney suggested: "It's best not to give any child access to too many playthings at one time. A 2-year-old boy or girl plays with one toy only six to eight minutes and then wants something else; but it's best not to give a youngster a chance to tire of all his new gifts at once. You'll find that the average child, after seeing all his Christmas presents, grows especially attached to one or two. The wise parent will put the others away, until the child grows weary of his favorites, and then brings out new toys one at a time throughout the year.

"And another point: Avoid giving any child a toy he can't manipulate himself. It's just as easy to find gifts that will develop his initiative and independence."

Doll Families.

Discussing toys on display at the school, Mrs. Heiney called attention to stockingnette and rag dolls of all types—some with wire skeletons that can be bent into any position; others as "spineless" as rag dolls have always been. "Rubber dolls are particularly suitable for very small children," she explained. "They are unbreakable—even the head is rubber—scrubbable, and fun to dress, undress and bathe. Stuffed animals and big balls are also favorites with children under 3."

"Finger painting" is an entertaining game for boys and girls from 3 years on up, she said. "The paint comes in jars," she explained. "The paper on which the 'picture' is made, is wet. The child simply dips his fingers into the color and smears it across the paper to suit himself. Some remarkable effects are obtained."

She also pointed out that a new addition to the doll collection is the "Clothespin Family," five little wood models with painted face, washable clothes and such appropriate names as "Ty" (the father), "Hattie" (the mother), "Baby," "Bobby," and "Clo." "These are sturdy, simple, easy to keep clean and interesting," she explained. "They would entertain almost any child from 3 years on."

Toy Suggestions.

Listing appropriate toys for children from 18 months to 8 years, Mrs. Heiney gave these suggestions for those under 3 years of age:

Color cones, peg boards, large beads to string, rubber and stockinette dolls, rubber balls, blocks, whistles and cymbals and big stuffed animals.

For those from 3 to 5: Weaving looms, stable with animals, doll's bassinette, sand toys, crayons, modeling clay, hammer and nail set, finger paints, bathtub toys and auto carriers.

For those from 5 to 8: Archery sets, cash registers, top money, peasant and clothespin dolls, doll furniture, auto racers, rope swings, big performing circus and trains.

Parents Urged To Be Tolerant Of Boys' Gangs

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

WHEN SAM was about 10, he began to play with a crowd of boys who proudly called themselves the "Main Line Gang." To his parents the name, even the word "gang" alone, had ominous associations.

They pictured Sam as a housebreaker, a potential criminal, evading the police and preying upon society. They questioned him about the gang's activities, and when he proved secretive they were more alarmed than ever.

The result of their attitude was that the gang actually did begin to be a neighborhood nuisance. The boys, feeling that they were frowned upon and regarded with suspicion, began to feel like outlaws and then to act accordingly.

Gang and club life are an essential part of a boy's life. Through them he begins to be socialized. Hitherto his world has been his family, but as he grows older he must choose his companions and his activities for himself and learn how to adjust himself to the outside world.

What his choice of ideals and comrades will be depends largely upon his up-bringing and his background. Parents can only hope that the standards which they have given him will be strong enough to influence him in the right direction.

Flower Sales Boom.

American men annually buy $50,000,000 worth of flowers for their sweethearts and $62,000,000 worth for their wives, Laurient Clody, of Chicago, secretary of the Allied Florists of Illinois, recently told the Associated Press. "The flower business," Clody said, "is 25 per cent above the depression low and getting better every day."

This BUSINESS of LIVING

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am writing to ask if by chance, plans are being made for another strangers' Christmas dinner such as was held at the Shoreham Hotel last Christmas? I noticed in your column such a dinner was also given on Thanksgiving Day, both last year and this year. Thanking you most sincerely for any information, I am, STRANGER.

• • • •

DEAR STRANGER: A Washington woman, Miss Grace A. Thompson, shouldered responsibility for arranging last year's Christmas dinner for strangers and lonely residents of Washington, as well as the Thanksgiving dinners of 1934 and 1935. Miss Thompson lives at the Jefferson Apartments and her telephone number is District 4704. However, I telephoned her home this morning intending to ask if she planned another such dinner for this Christmas, and was told she would be out of town until after the holidays. I don't know if anyone else is taking over the project in her absence, but perhaps some of our readers can tell us. I should be interested to hear from them. M. H.

She's Written a Song.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Is it possible to sell words of a song? If so, where is the best market to be found? I cannot compose music but this morning I had a sudden desire to compose something beautiful, so I tried. It may mean something, or it may have no merit, but I'd love to have a professional appraisal made of it. I shall watch The Post for your reply. Yours truly, MRS. F. E. C.

DEAR MRS. F. E. C: You can probably find the information you seek by studing a copy of Writers' Digest, a monthly publication to be found in bookstores and on newsstands, which carries a list of markets for all types of writing, songwriting included. Or you might get equally helpful information by calling the local music stores and asking the names of established music publishers. M. H.

Digitalis Used As a Stimulant For 150 Years

Shropshire Housewife Told Physician of Curative Powers in 1775.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

MORE THAN 150 years ago William Withering, an eminent physician and botanist of Birmingham, England, was told by an old Shropshire housewife that a tea made from the leaves of the foxglove (digitalis) would cure dropsy. He began using it in his practice in 1775 and ten years later published an account of a large number of cases in which the virtues of the drug were extolled. Withering failed to understand clearly that the removal of water from the tissues was accomplished through the effect of the foxglove upon the heart. That knowledge came later.

Beginning with the publication of this report digitalis has come to be the most important of our heart remedies, particularly in cases of heart failure. There are now numerous preparations of the drug and many similar substances have been identified as affecting the heart in a like manner.

We must not look upon digitalis as harmless, and its use calls for the highest skill on the part of the physician. If given more rapidly than it can be used and excreted there occurs a piling up within the body resulting in symptoms of poisoning. The amount that patient "A" can take may be entirely too much for patient "B." The condition of the heart, of the excretory organs, and the weight of the individual are some of the factors that must be considered.

Overdosage is followed by a chain of unpleasant symptoms, chief of which may be nausea and vomiting. Physicians are, as a rule, quite familiar with these toxic symptoms and recognize them as a warning that the saturation point has been reached. There may be an early loss of appetite or an increase in the irregular character of the heart beat. Sometimes extra beats will signify digitalis poisoning.

FAVORITE FOODS of famous folk

By Pattie Ellicott.

DURING the World War one of the most energetic workers in the Canteen Unit of the District Chapter of the American Red Cross was Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, then Mrs. George Vanderbilt, now the wife of Rhode Island's Senator.

Carrying a baskets of sandwiches and foodstuffs for the men of the A. E. F. passing through Washington on troop trains en route to embark for France, Mrs. Gerry did valiant service.

In her hospitable homes in Providence, Washington and at Biltmore, the princely Vanderbilt estate in North Carolina, her friends enjoy one of her favorite dishes, brioches, made from a pet recipe of her own which she contributed to the Congressional Club Cook Book.

Another recipe is often served at Biltmore where, since the marriage of her daughter, Mrs. John Cecil, Mrs. Gerry has lived in the picturesque Dower House. Her guests especially enjoy the Southern corn bread often a luncheon or breakfast feature.

Among those delectable corn breads are clover leaf corn rolls made as follows:

Clover Leaf Corn Rolls.

1 cup hot milk
¾ cup corn flour, or fine cornmeal
½ cup yeast
3 tablespoons lukewarm water
2 or 3 tablespoons shortening
½ tablespoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
2½ cups wheat flour

Pour hot milk over corn flour or meal and let stand until lukewarm. Add yeast, dissolved in lukewarm water and remaining ingredients. Knead until dough is smooth and elastic. Brush with cold water to prevent crust forming and let stand until light. Have muffin pans greased. Form dough into balls about an inch in diameter and put three into each muffin pan. Use no flour in shaping rolls, but keep fingers well greased. Let rise until double in bulk and bake in hot oven 20 minutes or more, according to size of pans.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

DON'T GET excited by this picture—we're not suggesting that your young hopeful be turned loose to select a Christmas gift for your home that you will have to grin and like. We merely mention a very good prescription for keeping the youngsters happy and in hand during the holidays when they are around the house all the time and likely to get restless. Let them be responsible for the wrapping of gifts for other members of the family. The results may turn out to be pretty peculiar sometimes, but that will be part of the holiday fun. The children will enjoy it if you provide just the right element of secrecy between them regarding gifts for other members of the family—and if you supply them with plenty of bright wrappings, plus a few ideas. Another way to keep them enchanted is to let them make decorations for the Christmas tree and the house. Tinfoil paper, sparkling cellophane, crepe paper and bright tissue paper, pretty wall paper and lengths of tinsel . . . pots of paste . . . needles and thread . . . scissors and pins . . . these are the materials that will be needed.

Send a stamp to Miss Boykin, care of The Post, for her bulletin, "How to Trim the Christmas Tree."

Hard Drinking Laid to Broker In Wife's Suit

Albemarle Hunt Liquor Enters G. L. Maxwell Separation Trial.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 18.—Further testimony tending to show that her husband was a habitual drinker was offered by Mrs. Katherine Thraves Maxwell today at the trial of her suit for separate maintenance from George L. Maxwell, New York broker.

Mrs. Maxwell, Kentucky-born sportswoman, who has charged cruelty and desertion and seeks custody of their child, was asked whether she recalled a party in Virginia at which one of her husband's friends told her Maxwell was "on the wagon."

"I certainly don't," she replied. "He never was."

Testimony earlier in the day brought renewed references to the 150-gallon supply of corn liquor which Mrs. Maxwell said yesterday her husband brought to the home at Greenwood, Va., and drank with the aid of the caretaker of the estate and "bootlegger friends" of the caretaker.

Today she refused to accept a suggestion that the liquor was secured for entertainment of the Albemarle Hunt Club, in which Maxwell was master of hounds. She reiterated that he played a leading role in the drinking parties.

It was brought out today that Mrs. Maxwell was lonely in New York, where she said she was forced to have her baby born despite a desire that the child be born in the South, and that she felt she was a prisoner in her husband's home here.

King in Utah Home As Junket Returns

While most of the members of the Congressional delegation to the Philippines will return to Washington today, Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, is stopping over at Salt Lake City.

Several important local legislative matters are awaiting the return of the Utah Senator and Chairman Mary T. Norton of the House District Committee.

Last fall Senator King indicated he would start hearings on the District government reorganization study, made by a sub-committee two years ago, probably before Congress reconvened. Pre-session hearings now appear impossible.

The District Commissioners are understood to be waiting to discuss tax proposals with Senator King and Mrs. Norton before submitting legislation. Mrs. Norton is not expected here before January 1.

Funds Aid Search For Tuberculosis

Authority to expend an additional $1,800 for making X-ray pictures of persons to detect evidence of tuberculosis was approved yesterday by Commissioner George E. Allen.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer, in charge of the city-wide effort to discover those suffering from the disease, had saved the extra money by avoiding use of rented quarters which had been thought necessary. The sum of $7,500 for such pictures had been provided. This was for 10,000 such pictures at 75 cents each. So far there have been 8,176 pictures made.

Today and tomorrow, from 8 a. m. to 9 p. m., pictures will be taken of applicants at the Eastern High School. Today women will be photographed and tomorrow men will be. Applicants to be photographed are those in part of the Southeast and Northeast sections.

Mr. and Mrs. Wally Ford at the Thelma Todd inquest yesterday at Los Angeles. Mrs. Ford believes she was last one to talk with actress before the tragedy.

Thelma Todd Death

along with the emphatic declaration of Mrs. Wallace Ford, wife of the actor, that Miss Todd called her by phone at her home at 4 p. m. Sunday.

County Autopsy Surgeon A. F. Wagner reported tonight, however, that death could have taken place anywhere from 12 to 30 hours before the body was found, but that in his opinion it had occurred approximately 18 hours before Miss Todd was discovered dead in the automobile parked in the garage.

Foreman George Rochester, saying he had information other than that presented in today's inquest, announced the grand jury probe would begin tomorrow or Friday.

It was indicated witnesses who told the coroner's jury of the blue-eyed comedienne's movements Saturday night when she attended a Hollywood night club party would be called before the grand jury.

The inquest verdict was returned shortly after County Autopsy Surgeon A. F. Wagner testified he believed exhaust gas from Miss Todd's car killed her.

The verdict read:

"Thelma Alice Todd Di Cicco came to her death December 15, 1935, in a garage at 17531 Posetano road, near Santa Monica, Calif., and from the evidence submitted to the jury, death appears to have been accidental, but we recommend further investigation by the proper authorities."

Dr. Wagner had testified an autopsy he made showed carbon monoxide (exhaust fumes) of between 75 and 80 per cent of saturation in Miss Todd's blood. He said traces of alcohol also were found in her brain.

The surgeon expressed belief she died between 6 and 8 a. m. Sunday. Her body was found Monday.

The name Di Cicco used in the inquest verdict was that of the movie player's former husband, Pat Di Cicco.

Lived Above Garage.

Seemingly, the inquest only added more mystery angles to the strange story of the actress' death. Some of the testimony hit at the conclusion that she died of monoxide gas. Investigators gave closer study to other possible theories.

Roland West, movie director and business partner of the blonde screen star, testified a "Mr. Smith" occupied an apartment above the garage in which Miss Todd was found dead about 4 a. m. Monday—presumably from exhaust fumes.

But, West said, Smith heard no motor running in the early Sunday morning hours when Miss Todd was believed to have entered the car.

With this and other developments at an inquest filled with sensations, George Rochester, county grand jury foreman, demanded an examination of the actress' stomach for possible evidence of poison.

West, who testified he occupied rooms near those of Miss Todd above the seaside cafe they operated jointly, interrupted a questioner to assert:

"A Mr. Smith lives in the apartment directly above the garage in which Miss Todd's car was kept. I questioned him and he said he got home about 2:40 o'clock Sunday morning."

This was shortly before Miss Todd returned from the party.

When Coroner Frank Nance asked if Smith could be reached, West said he had "gone to Santa Ana," it being his day off. Smith is cashier of the Todd-West Restaurant.

Hits at Theory.

None of the witnesses could account for Miss Todd's presence in the garage. It is about one-half mile up a steep incline from the apartments in the cafe.

West, who said he had been a close associate of the actress for two years, struck at what investigators regarded as their most plausible theory as to why she went to the garage.

Detectives had said West told them he "locked her out" of her apartment in the cafe because she did not come home from the party at 2 a. m., as he had asked.

West denied this flatly under questioning by Coroner Nance.

Added to this, Mrs. May Whitehead, the Negro maid who found Miss Todd's body at 10:30 a. m. Monday, said it was impossible for the actress to have been locked out.

"I gave her a key to the side door which she kept in her coin purse," the domestic said.

The maid testified the body's position changed between the time of discovery and the time the police arrived more than an hour later.

Apparently blasting a possible suicide theory, friends testified there apparently was no reason why she should want to die; that she was happy and full of life. She had recently signed a film contract reputedly calling for $1,500 a week.

The coroner's inquiry still had not delved into two possibly sinister matters in her life.

One of these was an alleged threat of extortionists to blow up her cafe unless she paid them $10,000.

The other was that she allegedly showed a sudden and marked change of spirit at the Saturday night Hollywood party, after sitting a few minutes at a table with Sid Grauman, theater operator, and three other persons.

"When she came back," said Arthur Prince, actor, to interviewers, "she was totally different. All her gaiety had evaporated. She seemed terribly depressed."

West said he "questioned" Smith, who related that he (Smith) got home about 2:30 a. m. Sunday, read until 3:30 or 3:45 and retired, directly above the garage to which Miss Todd presumably went after being driven to her apartment around 3:45 a. m.

"He says he didn't hear anything," West testified. "He had all the windows open."

Welfare Board Member Assails Peril; Club Hears Health Plea.

The lack of funds necessary to meet Washington's social welfare needs was discussed last night at a meeting of the Monday Evening Club, in Baker Hall. Former Judge Michael M. Doyle, member of the Board of Welfare, spoke of the danger of fire in some of the prison dormitories, constructed of wood.

"They are not better than shacks," said Mr. Doyle, "and in case of fire I do not like to think what would happen. We will have to ask for funds to replace these buildings."

Dr. George C. Ruhland, health commissioner, explained the situation as it affects his department. The District hospitals are so crowded that there are inadequate quarters for the nurses, as well as insufficient room to take care of persons in need of medical attention, he said.

"Not only are the hospitals overcrowded, but also the problem in the schools and the lack of public nurses makes the medical situation in Washington one of grave concern to the public health authorities," Dr. Ruhland pointed out.

E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel, surveyed the Washington tax situation, and showed how the public funds are spent. Herbert S. Wood, a former Government employe and tax expert, presided and introduced speakers.

Jurors Debating Fate Of Former Governor

Bismarck, N. Dak., Dec. 18 (AP).—A Federal court jury tonight was deliberating the guilt or innocence of former Gov. William Langer and two others charged with conspiracy to obstruct administration of an act of Congress. They were accused of soliciting political funds from State workers.

On trial with Langer for the third time were Frank A. Vogel, former highway commissioner, and R. A. Kinzer, once secretary of the State emergency relief committee.

Experts to Give Maxwell Death Verdict Today

Scientists to Say Whether Apoplexy or Blow Was Fatal.

By Virginia Lee Warren.
A Staff Correspondent.

Richmond, Dec. 18.—Three outstanding Virginia pathologists tomorrow will decide whether Trigg Maxwell died from apoplexy or from blows inflicted with a slipper by his daughter Edith.

Earl Maxwell, only brother of the Virginia school teacher who faces a 25-year term in State Prison for the killing, yesterday submitted copies of the autopsy report to the physicians.

The brother is fighting the verdict against his sister, who was convicted by a mountaineer jury despite her plea that the blows she struck were in self-defense during a brutal attack by her drunken father.

Maxwell has doubted the accuracy of the autopsy report made by two Wise County physicians, where the killing occurred, who attributed the death to a blood clot on the brain, resulting from the blows inflicted by the slipper.

The copies of the autopsy findings submitted to the Richmond pathologists were stripped of all names and circumstances which would identify the report as having connection with the Maxwell case.

The purpose, Maxwell said, was to insure an impartial report on the findings, because the case has caused some resentment in this city against the mountain code, upon which the girl is said to have been convicted.

Maxwell clings to the belief that his father died from apoplexy induced by his heavy drinking and the fury which he demonstrated in his attack on Edith for coming home after midnight.

The Post's fund for Edith Maxwell's defense soared above the $700 mark yesterday when eight contributions totaling $32.25 were received. The fund now contains $723.58.

School Board Moves to Add 2 Portables

Three-Month Campaign of Randle Highlands Citizens Succeeds.

Pupils' Enrollment Here in Decline Compared to Last Year's.

School officials moved yesterday to make available two more portable schools, while figures disclosed that total school enrollment had dropped by 323 pupils in the last month.

The new portables will be moved into Randle Highlands, marking the successful end of a three-months' drive by local citizens groups.

Mrs. Marion Wade Doyle, president of the Board of Education, reported to the board that the National Park Service had consented to use of six lots it owns for such schools at Thirty-fourth and E streets southeast. Information came from Roland Brennan, secretary to the Board of Commissioners, who said the land may be used for a maximum of two years—or until Minnesota avenue is opened up.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, received authority to transfer two portables to that site. Transfer is to be effected shortly by Assistant Superintendents Robert L. Haycock and Jere J. Crane.

Decrease Seasonal.

Dr. Ballou told the board that total enrollment on December 12 was 92,759 pupils. This compares with 93,082 on November 14, last. The decrease is seasonal. As compared with last December, enrollment is 1,518 pupils up.

The school board finally approved a new rule which will free candidates for primary grade teacherships from the previous requirement that they be able to play the piano.

Under the new rule, the superintendent may make up a list of kindergarten and primary candidates, some of whom may not have the music requirement. When a kindergarten vacancy occurs, he may go down the list to find a candidate able to play the piano, instead of arbitrarily having to pick the top name.

At the same time, Henry J. Gilligan, board vice president, interposed his belief for future policy that:

"We ought to develop more and more musical ability for the children in the schools."

Retirements Approved.

Other developments coming out of yesterday's board meeting included:

Approval of retirement applications of Miss S. E. Simons, head of the English department of the white schools, and N. E. Weatherless, head of the science department of the colored schools.

Acceptance of sound-moving equipment, valued at $1,000, given to Langley Junior High School by its Parent-Teacher Association.

Receipt of a protest from the East Central Civil Association which said closing of Dunbar Playground compelled 300 children to take to the streets for recreation.

Instruction to Dr. Ballou to learn whether teachers must pay for school books lost or damaged when those books have been charged to pupils who refuse to pay for them.

Decision to appoint a committee to study possible extension of vocational education to bring delinquent children and others into the present system.

Tragedy Is Forecast In Bus Overcrowding

Operators Unable to See Road Ahead, Citizens Charge at Hearing.

An express street car service between Takoma Park and the downtown section over the Ninth street car tracks, and other changes in routing of buses and cars, were urged at public hearings before the Public Utilities Commission yesterday.

Representatives of Manor Park, Chillum Heights, Takoma Park, D. C., and Takoma Park, Md., asked for the service and agreed the Fifth street express buses were overcrowded and insufficient in number in rush hours.

"You're going to have a terrible accident some day because the buses are so crowded the driver's can't see out of the doors," T. W. Buckley, 522 Peabody street northwest, treasurer of the Manor Park Citizens Association, said.

The "so-called express service," he complained, made stops at every corner. John H. Hanna, president of the Capital Transit Co., objected that if Buckley's proposal not to stop buses between Madison and K streets were adopted pupils attending Central High School could not be carried.

Health Menace Seen.

W. H. Parsons, 710 Elder street, representing the Citizens Association of Takoma, D. C., subsequently said he was convinced there would be many protests if the school stops were eliminated. Stops should be made for both Central High and Wilson Teachers College, Parsons said.

Buckley complained that crowding and lack of ventilation in the buses was such as to impair the health of passengers. W. B. Bennett, assistant to the president of the company, asked if Buckley's health had been impaired. William A. Robert, People's counsel, suggested that Buckley had not waited until he would have to appear as a ghost. Buckley said of course Bennett wouldn't know about conditions because he probably rode in a high-priced automobile. William McK. Clayton, public utilities committee chairman of the Federation of Citizens Associations and member of the Brightwood association, asked whether residents of Brightwood had any chance to get on the express buses. "None," replied Mr. Buckley.

Reason for Crowding.

The bus line was overcrowded, Parsons said, but it had drawn passengers from the street cars because "once you get on the bus" faster time is made. His complaint, he said, was that more buses are needed.

Riley E. Elgen.

W. H. Sequist, also representing Manor Park, said the company should not be required to run losing bus lines as a charitable act but his section could not understand why the company failed to provide sufficient buses to meet demands.

"People who want to go south in the mornings walk north, five or six blocks, in the hope of meeting a bus they can get on and perhaps find a seat," he said.

George H. Corbin, of 218 Peabody street, also a member of the Manor Park Association, agreed with others that street car service to the section should be improved. They urged double tracks along Kennedy street, continuation of car service to upper Fourteenth street, and speedier car service over the Georgia avenue-Seventh street line, and expanded bus service during the non-rush hours of the day and on Saturdays. The Manor Park representatives proposed an express bus service with a northern terminus in the neighborhood of Underwood street. If necessary, the commission should play the Washington Rapid Transit Co. against the Capital Transit Co. to force improvement of service, Corbin said.

Police Warn Drivers.

"For a 10-cent fare I believe riders are entitled to a seat," he said. "Of course, if the Capital Transit Co. wants to make tin cans out of their buses and pack the passengers in then we are entiled to a lower fare for that kind of service."

Ninth street tracks should be connected with the Georgia avenue tracks north of Florida avenue, Parsons said. Corbin supported this. So did H. C. Heffner, 107 Carroll avenue, Takoma, Md., representing the Takoma Park Community League. The present bus service, having its terminus in Takoma Park, was "a very excellent bus service from our standpoint, although the buses are crowded in the mornings and we can understand the complaints of those living to the south of us," he said.

H. C. Heffner.

Emphasizing the dangerous crowding on the buses, Parsons said that within the last month the police had warned drivers they would arrest them if they continued permitting so many passengers aboard.

Service on the Georgia avenue-Seventh street line was slowed by local traffic between Florida and Pennsylvania, avenues Parsons said. A Ninth street or an Eleventh street express car line would be a solution.

Rival Company Praised.

Cyrus T. Bright, residing at 13 Kennedy street and representing the Chillum Heights Association, gave his approval to what Parsons had said and gave high praise to bus service given by the Washington Rapid Transit Co. which "operated absolutely on schedule."

"Thank God we've got neighbors with automobiles. Otherwise we wouldn't be able to get to work in the morning," Edwin C. Reed, of Foxhall Village, said in protesting against overcrowded buses in that section. The Capital Transit Co. had no right to a monopoly if it did not give good service, Reed said.

James B. Evans, of the Security Finance Corporation, who resides at 4531 Dexter road, said he had to walk a mile to get on a bus.

Criticism Held Favored.

Failure of the company to synchronize arrival of cars and buses at transfer points and failure of conductors at times to have tokens and transfers was criticized by Mrs. Elizabeth Sullivan, representing the Progressive Citizens Association of Georgetown.

W. H. Seaquist.

Buses of the Burleith-Trinidad line should be routed down Nineteenth street from Dupont Circle, Milo H. Brinkley, of the Georgetown Citizens Association, said. Both street cars and buses are overloaded, he said, and attributed part of this to the pass system. Vehicles from this section carry different classes of persons, some of whom he described as rough and rowdy. Some company employes were discourteous and others too affable and gabby, he said.

Riley E. Elgen, chairman of the commission, presided.

The hearing will be resumed at 10 a. m. today.

Chevy Chase Majority Wants District Wet, Ballot Discloses

Vote Was Taken on Guyer Bill to Restore Prohibition Here.

Two of every three members present at last night's meeting of the Chevy Chase Citizens Associations expressed a desire that the District remain wet.

Edwin S. Hege, president of the group, established this by questioning the members on the Guyer bill which would return prohibition to the District.

Further questioning by Hege revealed that while one member was in favor of fewer liquor stores in the Chevy Chase section, one wanted more stores.

It was reported by the executive committee that the Capital Transit Co. has not demonstrated capacity to operate satisfactorily the bus line beween Chevy Chase and downtown Washington.

It was recommended that company officials use the buses at rush hours to get the viewpoint of patrons and that Connecticut avenue parking be prohibited during rush hours.

Dahlgren Terrace

A report suggesting new forms of taxation to be used for additional revenue needed by the District was presented last night to the Dahlgren Terrace Citizens Association by A. E. F. Scheer.

The recommendations of Scheer included an annual levy of $500 a foot against business firms using curb space for loading purposes and a 10 per cent tax of jewelry.

Presents will be distributed to the children and refreshments will be served. The Juanita K. Nye Council House is a memorial to the late Mrs. Juanita Kaufman Nye.

WPA Results Due in Month, Allen Asserts

Relief Policies Will Be Unchanged Until After January.

More Than 10,000 Now Are in Jobs; Similar Total Gets Aid.

Estimating full effect of the WPA job-making program on District relief rolls would be felt by January 15, Commissioner George E. Allen, following a conference with relief and works executives yesterday, announced there would be no change in relief policies this or next month.

Should there be an unexpected lag in putting eligible employables to work on WPA jobs the necessary few thousand additional dollars which would be needed to meet restored relief payments in January could be taken from remaining District funds, the District works and relief administrator said.

There were on relief rolls yesterday, 10,661, according to figures submitted to the Commissioner at the conference. It was estimated that by January 1 the number would be reduced to 9,500. There was a possibility the number would be reduced to 6,800 by January 15, it was said.

There were actually at work on WPA jobs yesterday 10,052. These were taken off relief rolls. There were, in addition, 1,954 persons working on WPA projects but still carried on relief rolls because their relief payments are to be continued until they receive their first WPA checks. An additional 2,585 relief employables are awaiting assignment to WPA jobs.

Unemployables on relief were estimated at 5,500. Since November 1 there have been 500 employables added to relief. These are not eligible for WPA jobs because they were not on relief prior to November 1.

If the present rate of intake continues there will be 800 more new cases added to relief by January 1. This would make a total of 6,800. That is now regarded by works and relief officials as the ultimate and final minimum which can be expected. It can only be reached if every eligible on relief is given a WPA or private job, it was said. Whether that low number ever is reached will depend on several factors and once it is reached it is expected to begin to grow again as new cases are added on the basis of future applications.

Dismissal of 66 employes from the Public Assistance Division was approved yesterday, effective December 15. This was made necessary by Commissioner Allen's order that relief administrative expenditures be cut 25 per cent this month.

Suspected 'Cat' Burglar Arrested in Florida.

Detective Sergt. Robert Bryant, of the headquarters clothing squad, left for St. Petersburg, Fla., yesterday to return a prisoner whom police believe may be the "cat" burglar who terrorized the Cleveland Park area with a series of housebreakings eight years ago.

Richard V. Korts, known in St. Petersburg as the "Cat" was arrested when he, a blonde woman and another man, attempted to dispose of loot allegedly secured in recent burglaries here. Police have been unable to learn the identity of the other man and woman.

Korts is wanted by Washington police for a series of housebreakings during the early part of this year. Police believe he may have acquired the nickname from his associates due to the publicity received in the Cleveland Park forays. While in Washington, Korts represented himself as a lieutenant in the Army and former Army flier.

The "cat" operated for several months in the Cleveland Park section and his burglaries became so daring citizens organized a vigilance committee to assist a special squad of police in hunting the thief. His activities suddenly ceased and he was never caught.

It was the year 1787 in Constitution Hall last night, and Benjamin Franklin called upon the help of God.

"God governs the affairs of men," he said, "and if a sparrow cannot fall to ground without his noticing it, much less can an empire arise without his aid."

With more than 2,500 persons watching, the great hall full of legal talent in tuxedoes and their ladies in satin and velvet, and 52 Colonial-silked men on the platform, Alexander Hamilton undertook to answer Franklin's call for prayer.

The Disrtict Bar Association was presenting its pageant, "The Making of the Constitution," in four episodes, from convening of the delegates to signing of the document.

Alexander Hamilton answered. The convention had come this far without prayer; to call in a minister now might be a confession of weakness; it should not seek "foreign aid."

But, although the actors voted not, presumably Benjamin Franklin was heard above. For, singularly uninspired though the first two episodes were, in truth, the presentation neared as close to action toward the end as it ever did.

The best performances were those of Al Philip Kane, as Franklin; Paul F. Hannah, as Oliver Ellsworth, delegate from Connecticut, and John D. Fitzgerald, as James Wilson, delegate from Pennsylvania.

Elevator Inspection By Police Demanded

Reiterating their recent charge that many hundreds of elevators in the District are being operated on expired certificates of inspection, the International Union of Elevator Costructors yesterday called for the support of William A. Roberts, people's counsel, and Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police.

In their letter to Brown the union called his attention to a provision of the District elevator code which gives police joint power with the inspector of buildings for the enforcement of elevator regulations.

Bandits Stage Four Holdups In Succession

Clerk's Quick Thinking Saves $1,000 During Robbery.

Filling Station Robbed; Ice Cream Store Is Raided.

Washington business men, their cash drawers filled with Christmas receipts, were victims of several bands of armed robbers last night. At least four holdups were staged in quick succession, sending police cars screaming through the streets.

Courage and presence of mind of a shipping clerk saved the Merchants Transfer & Storage Co. $1,000 in the holdup of the firm's shipping office at the rear of 920 E street in downtown Washington.

The robbery was staged by two colored men with masks covering their faces. Both carried large automatics.

Bundle of Bills Taken.

They entered the shipping office silently and without a word, forced the shipping clerk, William Lyddane, 48, of 443 Irving street northwest, and three other employes to stand by while one of them reached over a high desk and snatched a bundle containing between $200 and $500 in bills.

They made their demands known by motioning with their guns. Albert Harrison, 25, of 602 Columbia road, a clerk, stood at the rear of the office with his hands raised. John Brown, 22, of 1327 Union street southwest, and Raymond Crawley, 20, of 429 O street southwest, both colored porters, backed away from in front of the desk, their arms raised.

Suddenly Lyddane ducked behind the desk out of line of fire. As he moved he pulled a cash drawer to the floor, scattering hundreds of bills. The gunmen fled without trying to pick them up.

Filling Station Robbed.

At a filling station at North Capitol and Decatur streets two colored gunmen took more than $90, escaping in an automobile, the manager, William S. Madison, reported.

Rennie Quarles, manager of an ice cream store at 723½ Eighth street southeast, was held up by a lone colored man, who took $5 from a cash drawer. The man had previously entered the store and purchased ice cream, returning to hold it up.

John S. Williams, of 2421 Shannon place southeast, told police two colored men with pistols forced him to give up $33. This robbery occurred in the 900 block of Twenty-fifth street northwest.

"In Old Kentucky" Causes a Feeling of Regret That Rogers Was Not Better Served

A Famous Title Fails to Bring Luster to Star

Old Story Lost in Transit; Columbia Players Do a 'First Time' Here.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"IN OLD KENTUCKY," Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of the stage melodrama by Charles T. Dazey, adapted to the screen by Sam Hellman and Gladys Lehman, with additional dialogue by Henry Johnson, starring the late Will Rogers, with Dorothy Wilson, Russell Hardie, Charles Sellon, Louise Henry, Esther Dale, Alan Dinehart, Charles Richman, Etienne Girardot and "Bill" Robinson. Directed by George Marshall. Reviewed Wednesday night.

To those who remember the original Charles T. Dazey melodrama of the blue grass race tracks, "In Old Kentucky," will recall nothing.

There is none of the original play left in the film version that had its out-of-turn premiere on a Washington screen in Loew's Palace Theater yesterday. Something of the same formula has been preserved, but in texture, sequence and plot the new screen version of an old "ten-twent-thirt" standby has gone by the boards.

There is nothing in this subject to grip the imagination and the emotions with that tense surety that was exerted by "Steamboat Round the Bend." That was drama.

This earlier made, but later released, vehicle for the droll talents of a comedian whose versatility made him known to readers and radio listen-inners, as well as to play and picture-goers, is mere theatricalism.

And it is theatricalism that is tricked out with all of the tawdry devices of a cheap and superficial sense of dramatic values. As a matter of cold fact, there are no dramatic values in "In Old Kentucky" in its present manifestation.

Is Shopworn in Theme.

The business of the maidenly owner of a fine thoroughbred riding her own mount in the big race has been done from time immemorial—in "The Whip," "Mickey" and more other films than it is possible to recall to mind at the moment. That, nevertheless, is the climacteric implement with which "In Old Kentucky" is supposed to slay its customers.

Will Rogers is cast as a trainer of spirited horseflesh who permits sentiment to interfere with his job. He is fired by one stable and hired by the poverty-stricken rival, and wins the fabulous handicap when a rain-making contraption makes good at the last moment. It is this comedy trick which makes Charles Sellon, excellent character actor, a mere clown, that places this disappointing play adaptation in about the same category as Wheeler and Woolsey's "The Rainmakers." Mr. Sellon is entitled to more of the respect that theoretically attaches to age than is here accorded him.

And Mr. Rogers, too, could have done with a bit more consideration than the producing powers here have accorded him. His resort to blackface, the simulation of a "hoofer" and other imposts placed upon him by a script that could not have foreseen that this film was to have marked his valedictory after a tragic death in the Arctic, all contribute to a recession in excellence from the extravagant, but exciting, first of his two posthumous pictures, already referred to.

"Bill" Robinson Dances.

Dorothy Wilson, as the girl jockey who saves the day for the dear old Martingale stable, plays the carbon copy of a million roles of the same stamp that have gone before.

"Bill" Robinson, greatest of the theater's tap dancers, has a fair share of glory in the proceedings, and both Charles Richman and Alan Dinehart do their best to appear villainous in roles that long since have outlived their usefulness as important factors in entertainment.

Charles Sellon's wild old man, with a homicidal instinct and a loaded shotgun, is no less than pathetic in its comic aspirations. To be sure, the audience laughs uproariously at many of his quaint escapades, but I doubt if they could explain precisely what it is at which they are guffawing so loudly.

There are, however, some excellent subsidiary film features on view at the Palace this new week.

See Spanky McFarland.

Among them are a thoroughly hilarious Our Gang comedy. "Our Gang Follies of 1936," and a Silly Symphony, in natural color, that represents one of the most interesting and most timely of the Walt Disney creations, having to do, as it does, with the matter of Christmas toys.

The Metrotone News, with Ed Hill enunciating the important observations on the week's events, is the final complement of a feature which, in the parlance of the tracks with which it deals, runs a very deep second to "Steamboat Round the Bend" and affords its star a final outlet for his homely humor that is not in any sense commensurate with his imposing stature as one of the most talented and most revered of the screen's philosophical comics.

Columbians

"INHERITORS." The Columbia Players present the drama in four acts by Susan Glaspell, directed by Yvonne Kushner, with stage settings by Jane Lasater Rubey. At Pierce Hall, December 18 and 19. Reviewed Wednesday evening by W. A. Whitney.

THE CAST.

Grandmother	Elizabeth Dyer
Felix Fefevary, 1st	Oliver S. Anderson
Elsa Morton	Wade Robinson
Felix Fefevary, 3d	Elwood Godsall
Senator Lewis	Wayne Bobst
Felix Fefevary, 2d	Edward Stansbury
Morton	Richard Kreuzburg
Madeline Morton	Bunnie Skinner
Aunt Isabel	Betty Clark
Professor Holden	Robert M. Miller
Ira Morton	Edgar L. Kloten

Contrasting altruistic idealism and smug self-righteousness — a screed designed to expose the fallacy of "100 percentism"—the Columbia Players last evening presented their second play of the season, Susan Glaspell's "Inheritors," giving the work its initial Washington production.

Eminently successful last year was the same author's Pulitzer Prize-winning "Allison's House," likewise a local "first," but the current offering is the superior in every respect—in the manner of presentation no less than the play itself is of greater dramatic and philosophic depth.

Briefly, the story is that of the founding of Morton College, an institution which would make the life of each succeeding generation more abundant than its predecessor, there is some "Red" business in it, too.

With a keen, analytical pen, tracing a condition too truly existent, Miss Glaspell has formulated four acts, crammed with actionless dialogue, that are compelling to the ear and stimulating to cerebration.

Act One Is Best.

Act one possesses perhaps the greatest bit of dramatic writing of the entire play, the other three acts, transpiring 40 years later, more an academic argument upon a thesis than a reliving of a great human experience.

For this work the Columbia Players have selected a cast extraordinarily adapted to its tasks. In creating and maintaining realism, Wade Robinson is the principal performer, in the role of the pioneer's son who would "plant a college, so's after we're gone that college says for us, 'This is why we took the land.'" A noble character, nobly played. As his pioneering mother, with still green memories of those early experiences, Elizabeth Dyer was great.

In the more modern acts, Bunnie Skinner, as the granddaughter of the founder, is the keynoting player, striving to return to those ideals and that breadth of vision which led to the college's establishment. It is a difficult part, and she comes through with superb performance.

Support Scores.

The uncle, whose asinine disregard of purpose lead to the difficulties, is commendably played by Edward Stansbury. Edgar L. Kloten, as Miss Skinner's mildly demented father, does a superb piece of acting.

Others in the cast include B. A. P. Doehrer, Oliver S. Anderson, Wade Robinson, Elwood Godsall, Wayne Bobst, Richard Kreuzberg, Peggy Gusack, Aline Wharton, Betty Clark, George Edwards, Robert M. Miller, and G. DeWitt Miller. Let it be distinctly understood, this perfunctory listing by no means relegates the performances of these players to insignficance. Every one of them performs his task with skill and enthusiasm, making this probably the Players outstanding assemblage of actors.

For Yvonne Kushner's direction and Jane Lasater Rubey's sets, orchids in profusion.

Come to Earle Screen Tomorrow

We shall omit all reference to the bromidic observation that "art is long and the title 'Fleet'" in this terse announcement that it is Miss Glenda Farrell who is pictured above and that she is "teamed," in a manner of speaking, with Joan Blondell in "Miss Pacific Fleet," the screen feature for the week beginning tomorrow at the Warner Brothers Earle Theater. Hugh Herbert is chief buffoon in this particular charade, in conjunction with which Jane Froman, songstress, will appear on the stage in person.

A Gaudy Circus Heads Yuletide Stage Program

Loew's Fox Will Offer an Innovation When New Xmas Bills Arrive.

Live elephants, clowns, dogs, ponies and all of the spectacular accoutrements of a full-fledged circus, save only the canvas "big top" and the sideshows, will be in evidence at Loew's Fox Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, when the stage will be occupied by a Yuletide attraction the like of which never before has been presented under roof in a Capital playhouse. Among those whose talents will add to the glamour of the innovation will be The Great Yacopis, Martin & Martin, aerialists; Alf Loyal's Dogs, Schilitl's Marionettes, the Hanneford Family, Picard and his Seal and numerous other notables of the circus world. Even a calliope will toot out its steaming tunes to lend an added note of the tanbark to the goings-on. On the screen the attraction will be "Charlie Chan's Secret," another of the mystery tales based on the original formula created by Earl Derr Biggers and perpetuated as a source of unending employment for that sterling actor, Warner Oland: Newsreel and Phil Lampkin's orchestral contributions will complete the holiday bill.

* * * *

Joan Blondell, Glenda Farrell, Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins, Minna Gombell and Warren Hull are among the stellar players who lend their talents to "Miss Pacific Fleet," the screen feature for the week beginning tomorrow at the Earle Theater. The story is a frolicsome affair that provides a basis of romantic comedy for the gifted miming of the principals. On the stage, Jane Froman, prominent in the cast with Pat O'Brien and Frank McHugh in "Stars Over Broadway," the current picture at the Earle, will appear in person as headliner of the vaudeville bill, just as Mr. O'Brien is doing this week. Miss Froman comes to Washington direct from a subtropical vacation at Miami Beach, Fla. Others on the stage portion of the bill include Moore and Revel, "royal jesters of the dance;" Frank Gaby and Carlton Emmy and His Mad Wags, the best dog act in captivity. Short screen subjects, newsreel and orchestra, with Freddie Clark, will complete the entertainment.

* * * *

Beginning tomorrow at RKO-Keith's Theater the major screen attraction will be "Another Face," the story of a gangster who undertakes to become a movie star, with surprising results. Brian Donlevy, an actor of high ranking in the living theater, who made his picture debut as the killer in "Barbary Coast," with Edward G. Robinson, Miriam Hopkins and Joel McCrea, plays the part of the gangster. He shares honors with Wallace Ford and Phyllis Brooks. The development of the plot entails the secret ministrations of a plastic surgeon, which gives a vague insight into the genesis of the title—something that was done as far back as Milton Sills' "Skin Deep," in the old silent days. This picture will run only until next Wednesday, Christmas Day, when Katharine Hepburn will occupy the screen in "Sylvia Scarlett."

* * * *

Barton MacLane, the screen bad man of "G-Men," "Dr. Socrates" and "Frisco Kid," will be seen for the first time as an individual star in "Man of Iron," the principal screen feature announced for the week beginning tomorrow at the Metropolitan. Dawn Powell wrote the story, which, in its celluloid form, engages the talents of Mary Astor, John Eldredge, Dorothy Peterson, Joseph Crehan and Joseph King. This subject is said to possess the priceless asset of amusing comedy in addition to its tenseness as thrilling melodrama. Short sound subjects and full newsreel complete the program.

* * * *

"The Gay Deception" is the title of the screen play that will occupy the place of prime importance on the bill at Loew's Columbia Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. In the cast will be seen Francis Lederer, Frances Dee, the leads; Benita Hume, the charming British actress who bears so striking a resemblance to Mary Astor; Alan Mowbray, Akin Tamiroff, Paul Hurst, Ferdinand Gottschalk and Robert Craig. The story is a romantic and hilarious one, dealing with the experiences of a small-town stenographer in search of big-town thrills. Short sound subjects and news events will round out the bill.

* * * *

"Mimi," based on Murger's "La Vie de Boheme," the source also of the libretto of Puccini's grand opera of "La Boheme," will continue for another week on the screen at the Belasco, with Gertrude Lawrence and Douglas Fairbanks, jr., in the roles of prime importance. It will be succeded on Christmas Day by the unique Soviet production of "The New Gulliver," employing 3,000 puppets and one living actor. Short subjects and Pathe News will complete the new holiday bill.

* * * *

W. C. Fields, in "The Man on the Flying Trapeze," will supply the chief interest on the screen at the Little Theater for the balance of the current week, beginning today and continuing through Saturday. In this hilarious comedy subject, the star is supported by Mary Brian and an excellently chosen cast.

* * * *

Countess Vanya, known as "the vamp," is the stellar attraction with the "Merry Maidens" company opening a week's engagement in the Gayety Theater beginning with the customary matinee on Sunday. For this, her first Washington appearance, the countess will present her celebrated "Dance of the Bats." Others in the cast include Harry "Hello Jack" Fields, Inez Martin, Herman Ferber, Winston & Lolette, Bert Grant, "Hap" Hyatt, Margot Lopez, Adri Ann and Irene Ross.

Court of Equity Sought to Hear Juvenile Cases

Rep. Norton Sponsors Bill to Abolish Criminal Phases of Office.

The District Juvenile Court would be changed from a criminal tribunal to an equity court under the terms of a bill to be introduced early in the approaching session of Congress by Representative Mary T. Norton, chairman of the House District Committee, on behalf of the District Bar Association, it was disclosed yesterday.

The theory behind the legislation, as explained by H. Winship Wheatley, president of the bar association, is that "a criminal court is no place for a juvenile."

Delinquent children will be placed under the care of competent guardians and be left in the custody of their parents only so long as the parents prove themselves fit guardians, if the bill is enacted as proposed by the bar association.

Committee Named.

A special committee headed by Walter C. Clephane was named yesterday by Wheatley to take whatever action is necessary to promote the legislation. Other members are Frank K. Nesbitt, Frederick H. Stohlman, Frank S. Bright and Harry Hickey.

Wheatley explained that all the members of the committee are intensely interested in the problem of juvenile delinquency, although they have never practiced in the District Juvenile Court. The proposed act is in line with the most advanced thought and legislation dealing with juveniles.

Justice Jesse C. Adkins, of District Supreme Court, proposed legislation aiming at the same purpose some years ago, Wheatley said, and the new bill drafted by John E. Laskey follows a similar outline.

Seen as Crime Solution.

Mrs. Norton, in announcing that she would sponsor the bill, said that "in the juvenile court lies the solution of many of the present-day crime problems.

"If we are to combat crime, we must look to the proper juvenile court procedure," she said. "The present Juvenile Court of the District, established by an act of Congress approved March 19, 1906, does not meet with present-day conditions. It is a criminal, not a chancery court. Its emphasis is on prosecution, not correction.

The bill I have in mind is based upon the principle that the child who comes before the court shall not be regarded as a criminal—that if it is possible to save the child and make a useful citizen of him, every opportunity should be offered."

3,312 HOLC Loans Are Repaid in Full

By the Associated Press.

The Home Owners Loan Corporation said yesterday it had written "paid in full" on 3,312 loans totaling approximately $9,000,000.

Although the borrowers had 15 years to complete their payments, the home owners procured funds to make full settlement. The HOLC said this was made possible by improved circumstances resulting from re-employment or increased earning; release of funds in closed banks; recovery in rentals and property values and inheritances or other sudden acquisition of cash assets.

As another prop for its assumption that improved conditions will be reflected in HOLC repayments, the corporation has reported a $1,000,000-per-month increase in total payments for the last three months, with the aggregate for November standing around $17,000,000.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Joint recital by Kirsten Flagstad, soprano, and Roman Totenberg, violinist (Edwin McArthur and Arpad Sandor, accompanists) in Mayflower Hotel ballroom Wednesday morning. Program: An die Musik, Du bist die Ruhe, Die Forelle (Schubert), Dich, teure Halle (Wagner), Eros, En Svane, En Drom (Grieg), When I Have Sung My Songs to You (Charles), Floods of Spring (Rakhmaninov), Elsas Traum, Isoldes Liebestod (Wagner); Aria (Bach), Prelude and Allegro in the Style of Pugnani (Kreisler), Prayer (Handel-Flesch), Guitarre (Moszkovski), Zapatedo (Sarasate), Danza (De Falla), La Fontaine d'Arethuse (Szymanovski, Polonaise (Vieniavski).

Next to the critics's joy of discovery is his delight in finding that the eulogies pronounced by his colleagues elsewhere have the accent of truth. Since the night when Kirsten Flagstad made her debut in the Metropolitan Opera House, one has read nothing but praise of this singer from Oslo, laudations which one might have suspected of extravagance, had it not been for the authority of the superlative adjectives had all been justified by basic facts.

Kirsten Flagstad is a great artist whose primary characteristic is magnificent simplicity. Although she has attained fame through that most treacherous of mediums, the operatic stage, she has disarmed its dangers by her sincerity. She has been unscathed by theatricality and unsullied by the torch of histrionic falseness. She has been preserved by her self-dedicaton to the spirit of music, by the purity of her devotion to the ideals of song.

The candid quality of her art was instantly appreciable in her utterly natural reading of her first song, Schubert's beautiful invocation, "An die Musik." Here was the pure essence of singing, untinged by the slightest artificiality. The freely flowing tone followed the contour of the melodic line with perfect justness of inflection and stress; each phrase had its exact value, each note its precise adjutsment of volume. So simple was the song, so frank the feeling, so spontaneous the impulse, that one was unaware of the underlying technique.

And of the mere mechanics of singing one remained unaware, whatever she sang, whether it was a lyric poem by Grieg, Elizabeth's joyous greeting to the minnesingers' hall, Elsa's rapt narration of her dream, or Isolde's transfigured and ecstatic death. Always the tone was so steadily supported on the breath, so weightless in its floating and airy utterance, that it was disembodied sound.

This artistic impersonality is not to be confused with temperamental coldness. Cold is the last word that one would apply to Kirsten Flagstad, who vibrates sensitively to every tension of musical feeling. But she has disciplined that sensitivity and made it the instrument of expression, an instrument so delicately responsive that she need put forth no apparent effort in its use. The splendid results of that discipline were manifest in the physical calm with which she sang the Liebestod, a passivity of the body that concentrated the whole being of the singer in the poignant voice.

As for Mme. Flagstad's vocal technique, it must have been patent to every listener that it owes its surety of tone placement, its felicity of phrasing, its plastic smoothness and its fine gradations of dynamics to her perfect breath control. That mastery of breath, the life of song, tells of infinite patience in practice, of long and vigilant schooling, of that Spartan training without which great artistry cannot be won.

Roman Totenberg, whose American debut with the National Symphony Orchestra is still fresh in memory, disclosed additional artistic traits which his performance of the Beethoven concerto had kept in abeyance. The same broad and eloquent tone came out in the Bach aria for the G string, which was played in consonance with its nobility. But new aspects of his virtuosity sparkled in the Kreisler pastiche, scintillated in the technical tricks of Sarasate, and glowed ethereally in the Szymanovski fantasy.

Excellently equipped on the technical side, this young musician admirably combines poise with ebullience. He has maturity in his command of the violin and in his musical insight, while his poetic enthusiasm is still eager and unspoiled.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Five Leading Ladies.

Hollywood, Dec. 18.

THE Dionne quintuplets have completed their acting for the flicker, "The Country Doctor." As your writing servant I believe you would be interested in knowing how the quintuplets performed for the camera and how they behaved with the Hollywood strangers. The best person to ask about this is Director Henry King, who filmed the scenes and directed the quints, although they didn't know it.

Director King is not given to enthusiasm. He admitted that his 5-year-old daughter was more excited over his assignment than he was. He returned from Callander, Ont., a Dionne and Dr. Dafoe fan.

He said that the quints were such excellent troupers that he got more and better scenes than he expected. He explained the procedure used.

* * * *

The quintuplets arise between 5 and 6 in the morning. They are bathed, have breakfast and are turned loose in the nursery. Then they are bundled in their Eskimo suits, placed in their carriages, which have leather canopies, and wheeled out onto the porch, where they sleep. They awake about 11 o'clock, generally a little after. Director King, the cameraman, the sound man, the electrician, Actor Jean Hersholt and Actress Dorothy Peterson waited in the nursery. This was the hour when Director King did the shooting. He worked with the quints about 30 minutes, 45 minutes at the most. Dr. Dafoe was always in the room. He supervised.

* * * *

It was fun for the quintuplets. They didn't know that they were working and acting. They were not camera shy. In fact, they tried to climb up the legs of the camera, and one of the main tasks was to keep them from upsetting the machine. Whenever Dr. Dafoe believed they had enough of a good time, he gave the signal to stop. He didn't want the quints to become excited.

The quints behaved excellently for the Hollywood strangers. Dorothy Peterson, who portrays a nurse, was attired in a nurse's uniform. When she walked into the scene the children did as she wished for they took her to be one of the regular nurses. Jean Hersholt, wearing a sterlized white gown similar to Dr. Dafoe's, must have been mistaken for the genuine doctor, for the children looked toward him and obeyed. Director King says that the quints love Dr. Dafoe.

* * * *

The actual scenes of the children were not written in the scenario. They were merely wished for. There were certain lines Miss Peterson and Mr. Hersholt had to say, and it was hoped that the quints wouldn't ruin them. They seldom did. Director King explained that he tried to get as many scenes of the quints acting naturally as he could. There was the eating sequence. The quintuplets were placed in their chairs, with their food before them, as usual. Yvonne bawled and banged her spoon on the chair. Actor Hersholt said: "Now, lady, behave yourself." Yvonne stopped crying. She looked up and started to laugh. The camera was turning. It will look like acting on the screen—but it wasn't.

* * * *

Director King had difficulty telling the quintuplets apart. Yvonne, Cecila and Emilie looked alike to him. Maria was the one who still crawled and Annette was the other one. This was the best he could do. He says that Marie, despite her failure to walk, seemed to be the leader; at least the others always looked to her and sometimes followed her example.

Oliva and Elzire Dionne, the parents of the quints, didn't come around and didn't see one scene being filmed. Director King did have a talk one evening with Mr. Dionne but he never met Mrs. Dionne.

The quints are beginning to talk, but everything they say sounds like "da-da-da-da." However, according to Director King, the quintuplets will learn to speak French first, not English. This is being done because Mrs. Dionne speaks French.

* * * *

There is great interest in the quintuplets' feature picture. Everyone at the studio wants to get into the projection room to see it. There is no doubt that it will be a box office wonder. Practically every big actress and actor has asked to have a glimpse of the film, and the most eager of all is Shirley Temple.

Shirley, the child star, who is accustomed to adoration, must feel very grown up when she says: "I can hardly wait to see the babies." The Dionne quintuplets have made Shirley Temple a movie fan.

Mrs. Norton to Offer 'Good' D. C. Race Bill in Next Congress

Plan Similar To Black's Favored

Committeewoman Plans to Push Law Making Betting Legal.

O'Hara Ready to Build $2,000,000 Plant at Benning Site.

A FLYING start was assured the move to legalize horse racing in Washington when Representative Mary Norton, chairman of the House District Committee, announced yesterday that she would introduce "a good race track bill" when Congress convenes.

Mrs. Norton said she was studying the subject thoroughly. She favored a bill introduced last year by Representative Loring M. Black, of New York, which did not pass Congress.

Walter O'Hara, millionaire New England sportsman who introduced racing in Rhode Island at Narragansett Park, has said he will build a $2,000,000 plant on the site of the old Benning layout if the sport is made lawful here.

O'Hara holds an option on the Benning site and has a staff of architects ready to make plans for one of the most elaborate tracks in the country if the Norton, or a similar, bill is passed.

Bill Lost in Senate Jam.

The first serious effort to return racing to the District since the Benning track was closed in 1906 met with failure after a fast start last year. The bill introduced by Representative Black went through the House, but in the closing jam in the Senate was placed on the unanimous consent calendar. Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, voiced the one objection necessary to kill the measure.

Mrs. Norton has not said in whose hands control of the sport would be placed by her bill. The Black bill would have placed control in the hands of the District Commissioners. The District would have collected 10 per cent of the admissions and 2 per cent of all wagers. The Black bill was opposed by the Federation of Citizens Associations and a few religious organizations.

O'Hara, a former newspaper man, has been one of the most successful figures in the racing game since he turned his attention to the turf. His Narragansett plant gave to Rhode Island a revenue of $1,250,000 this year in the face of opposition from other tracks erected in the vicinity after his venture was successful.

Opposition to the legalization of racing in Washington generally is expected to develop from Congress member representing Maryland, where the sport is legalized and draws great support from the District.

Virginia, too, in which there is a strong movement to legalize the sport of kings, may oppose an effort to legalize it here.

In Washington itself some opposition may develop from church organizations, possibly from citizens' associations and perhaps from interests operating other sports that may suffer if racing is brought into the Capital.

Washington has been a hotbed of racing interest for many years. It is believed to have been introduced in the District about 1769 on a track located in Georgetown.

From Georgetown, a separate city at that time, racing removed to Washington proper, on a mile course located on the present site of the State, War any Navy Building and Lafayette Park.

Another track was opened on the Holmead Farm in the vicinity of Sixteenth street and Columbia road early in the nineteenth century. Racing ended for years with the outbreak of the War of 1812.

In 1822, the sport was resumed at the same old location. Later other tracks were built in the Northeast and Northwest sections. In 1870, the Ivy City track was opened, to remain in operation until 1890, when the Benning site opened. Racing ended there on April 12, 1908—the last day racing was held here.

Mosconi Knocks Caras Out of Cue Event Lead

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—Willie Mosconi, sensational young Philadelphia player, knocked the equally youthful Jimmy Caras, of Wilmington, Del., out of the lead in the world's pocket billiards championship tonight by defeating him, 125 to 79, in a 12-inning match.

The defeat dropped Caras out of a first-place tie with Edwin Rudolph, of Cleveland, and left him tied with Mosconi and George Kelly, of Philadelphia, for second. Each had five victories and two defeats in the round-robin tourney. Rudolph, who was not scheduled to play today, had won five games and lost only one.

Two Futile Points for Hoyas

Minneapolis Buys Ryan From Yanks

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 18.—John "Blondy" Ryan, hero of the 1933 World Series for the Giants against Washington, today found himself back in the minor leagues again when he was sold by the Yankees to the Minneapolis Club of the American Association.

Ryan, a batting and fielding star on many crucial occasions while the Giants were battling the Nats in the '33 series, was traded in 1934 to the Phillies, who later released him to Baltimore, of the International League.

Following the injury to Shortstop Frank Crosetti, the Yankees bought Ryan from Baltimore late in the 1935 season. Never a powerful hitter, he failed to fit into the Yankees' lineup.

Drops Overtime Battle as Bloom Scores Two Snowbird Shots.

3,000 Watch Visitors Tie Game Near End, Go On to Win.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

THERE was no love in Bloom last night, just a pair of long, entwining arms and cold, calculating eyes that first saved Temple from defeat and then tossed the Owls to a thrilling 44-43 victory over Georgetown in an overtime battle at Tech High School.

Three thousand shrieking fans saw the 6-foot 5-inch Meyer Bloom, who at one time contemplated entering Georgetown, fire a long shot from midcourt that rippled through the hoop just as the final whistle blew and tied the score at 39-39. The same 3,000 howled in dismay as the lanky center shoved two "snowbirds" through in one-two succession just as the five-minute extra period got under way, definitely sealing the Hoyas fate.

A laconic lad, who maneuvered his ungainly frame around the court unusually agilely, Meyer didn't burst into full bloom as a courtman until the final half. But once under way there was no stopping him. He pocketed 10 field goals and 3 fouls, 23 points, leading both teams by a wide margin.

Runs Gamut of Thrills.

Tech High gym was no place for weak hearts last night, for it harbored a game that ran the gamut of thrills in basketball. But for a streak of sophomoric inexperience near the end, Georgetown undoubtedly would have scored its second victory in 11 games with Temple and been off to a flying start in the Eastern Conference race.

The Hoyas surprised by assuming the offensive at the outset, and succeeded in running up an 8-to-0 lead in the first six minutes of play. With Harry Bassin, Don Gibeau and Tom Nolan leading the attack, Georgetown gradually pushed its advantage to 26 to 10 at the half and seemed well on its way to victory. But the young Eiffel Tower at center had yet to be heard from.

Nolan and Bassin sunk field goals, giving their team a 30-to-10 lead, as the final half opened. Fouls by Ernie Messikomer and Don Shields and a field goal by Steve Juenger put Temple back in the game. But Don Gibeau's foul and another bucket by Nolan was Georgetown's reply. Then came the deluge.

The Finesse of Pros.

Working the ball with the finesse of pros and ringing the bell with unfailing accuracy, Greenberg, Bloom and Messikomer gradually cut deeply into the Hoya's lead. Bloom topped the rally with four consecutive field goals that made it 39 to 35, Georgetown still leading. There was an interruption while Messikomer dropped in two fouls, and then came the tying field goal and the two buckets that eventually won the ball game.

In a preliminary game, Eastern High School defeated the Georgetown Freshmen, 36 to 33.

Gallaudet's Gridmen Demand New Coach

Orrel Mitchell Is Given Post as Assistant After Uprising.

TWENTY-FIVE Gallaudet football players, revolting on the eve of an athletic board meeting last night, yesterday launched a "Mitchell for Coach" campaign and succeeded in gaining their end.

Despite the appointment of Wally Krug to succeed Teddy Hughes, who resigned last month as head football coach, Gallaudet students continued to express dissatisfaction and made known their preference for Orrel Mitchell, Gonzaga High School coach.

At a meeting of the squad Mitchell was voted the unanimous choice of the players, who communicated their action to the athletic board.

The athletic board later announced that Mitchell had been offered the post as assistant coach to Krug, with the intimation that he had already accepted.

Given Full Rein.

Krug, however, strongly intimated that Mitchell would be given full rein with the football team in reciognition of his sensational success with Gonzaga teams of the past several years.

Mitchell, a product of the Washington sandlots and Georgetown University, has ranked high for several years among coaches of schoolboy teams in this section. His Gonzaga elevens, always well grounded in fundamentals, featured a deceptive style of play.

Oklahoma Won't Join In Adding Court Rule

Norman, Okla., Dec. 18 (AP).—Hugh V. McDermott, coach of the University of Oklahoma basketball team, decided today the game has enough rules.

He announced Oklahoma will not join with the other five members of the Big Six Conference in adding a third circle, similar to the free-throw circles, in the center of the floor for jump balls. Sponsors of the third circle believe it would eliminate jumps near the sidelines, often ending in out-of-bound plays which slow up the game.

Young Danville Player Purchased By Pirates

Pittsburgh, Dec. 18 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates announced today the purchase of a young right-hand pitcher of the Middle Atlantic League and a hustling infielder from the Bi-State League.

Both John Wasco, 6-feet-3-inch hurler last year with Portsmouth, Ohio, and John Duncan Barkley, with Danville, Va., will report to the Pirates' spring training camp at San Antonio next spring.

Both are 20 years old and are expected to be farmed out next season for more experience.

Unable to compete this season because of his failure to make his championship weight, Tollefson becomes the only student on the coaching staff.

Discovery's Coast Weight 130 Pounds

1935 Champion Carries Only 3 Pounds More Than Cavalcade.

Azucar, Winner of Last $100,000 Race Picks Up One Pound.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 18.—Top weight of 130 pounds was asked of Discovery today for the Santa Anita $100,000 handicap to be run here February 22.

A. G. Vanderbilt's 4-year-old son of Display, greatest stake horse of the 1935 season, was assessed only 3 pounds more than Cavalcade, however, for the mile and a quarter event—the world's richest racing classic.

Third in the list of 83 nominations was Head Play, whose phenomenal comeback impelled Webb Everett, racing secretary of the Los Angeles Turf Club, to assign 121 pounds to the handsome thoroughbred that finished almost last here a year ago.

Azucar Gets 118 Pounds.

Flamenco, English-bred colt, was listed fourth with 120 pounds in the boot, followed by Azucar, 1935 winner, which will carry 118 pounds, only one more than he packed to victory for $108,400 last February.

Top Row, winner of more than a hundred thousand dollars in stakes during 1935 and twice conqueror of Discovery, was called upon to carry 116 pounds, seven more than last spring when he finished fourth.

Ladysman, second to Azucar in the first running of the Santa Anita feature, drew an 115-pound assessment compared with 117 pounds a year ago. Time Supply, which was third, will carry 114, a reduction of 3.

Discovery Likely Choice.

Discovery, which was asked to carry as high as 139 pounds during the peak of his summer campaign should, if he trains well, go to the post an odds-on favorite. The fact remained, however, that Cavalcade, conqueror of Discovery as a 3-year-old, certainly would make a race of it if he is sufficiently recovered from the injury that kept the Brookmeade Stable's star out of the first race here a year ago.

The total purse for the event now is $108,300. An assessment of $250 will be asked as entry fees

Duke Defeats Catholic U., 39 to 36

Rolls Up Heavy Lead, Then Barely Lasts to Triumph.

DUKE'S BLUE DEVILS opened a season of basketball campaigning last night by rolling up a long lead on Catholic University on the Brookland court, then barely lasting to nose out the local five, 39 to 36. A packed house of 1,500 was presented with a gym full of thrills in the last few minutes of play.

The Carolina outfit, long a power in Southern basketball, led, 20-17, at half time and ran up the score ten points higher before Zeke Brown finally managed to tally a field goal six minutes after intermission.

The count was 35 to 24 with four minutes to go when the Cards opened up. Led by Brown and Adamaitis, the Capital five suddenly began finding the middle of the basket to make up for some two dozen snowbirds unaccountably missed earlier in the game. The Devils made just one goal during this rally but those two points were worth the victory.

Podger Victors' Star.

Shining bright in the invaders' offense was a Mr. Kenny Podger, endowed with the ability to toss the ball basketward successfully from practically any angle or distance. Mr. Podger did everything but stand on his head while scoring his five field goals. Capt. Kunkel tied with Podger to lead Duke's scoring, while Catholic U.'s lofty center, Bernie Lieb, did his best to save the Cards from their first beating of the season by recording an even dozen points.

The Brooklanders appeared the better team throughout—better in form and tactics—but the Brooklanders just couldn't find that basket until it was too late to do much good.

A duel of gridiron stars kept the crowd's interest during the short time that "Ace" Parker—"the man who beat Carolina"—and Irish Carroll were both in the game. Any abilities of either were stalemated by the defensive play of both—if you get the idea.

Frosh Beat Western.

In a preliminary game Catholic University freshmen nosed out Western High, 30-28, thanks to a last-minute field goal by Ambrose, left forward.

DIAMOND JUBILEE YEAR

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

REPRESENTATIVE MARY NORTON, who comes by her title of "Mayor of Washington" by virtue of her chairmanship of Congress' District of Columbia Committee, apparently has taken a circumspect view of the horse-racing situation here and hereabouts. Mrs. Norton, in a statement yesterday, said she would introduce a bill to legalize racing in the District at the next session of Congress and, obviously, proponents of the idea could find no better sponsor.

POVICH.

With all due respect to Representative Norton, it does not require a brilliant mind to realize that hundreds of thousands of dollars now poured into the Maryland State treasury by Washington race-goers would be diverted into the District of Columbia exchequer if racing were legalized here. But in her determination to do something about the matter, Mrs. Norton may shame the District Commissioners into action.

It was the District Commissioners, you remember, who turned emphatic thumbs down on a District racing bill last year, despite the fact that two of the trio are confirmed race track fans. One of the Commissioners, in fact, operates a racing stable which he is pleased to race on Maryland tracks, but last winter he calmly voted "no" when asked for a recommendation on a District racing bill by the House District Committee. Sauce for the goose, it seems, is poison for the gander.

Within the past four years, the number of States boasting legalized racing has increased from 5 to 23. Those additional 18 States, it seems, were eager to tap the source of ready revenue that legalized racing presented. The District, perhaps, doesn't need the hundreds or thousands of dollars that would flow into its treasury as race taxes, but Representative Norton seems to differ with the Commissioners on the subject.

WALTER E. O'HARA, the New England sportsman and industrialist, has already promised to construct a $2,000,000 track on the site of the old Benning course if racing is legalized in the District. He already has purchased an option on the site. Thus the city is already promised the sport on a grand scale. O'Hara enterprises are the sensation of the turf world. His Narragansett track at Pawtucket was the most popular of all the Nation's tracks last year and poured $1,250,000 into the Rhode Island treasury in taxes.

Washington would be assured a big league racing season under O'Hara's management. A Benning track would overshadow racing in nearby Maryland. O'Hara scoffs at the $600 and $800 purses which represent the average offerings at Havre de Grace, Laurel, Pimlico and Bowie. He introduced the $1,000 purse at Narragansett and says he would not offer less for overnight races at Benning. That a Benning track would attract the best horses in the East under those conditions is obvious.

The Nation was rid of a deal of its hypocrisy with the passage of prohibition repeal and legalized racing in Washington would likewise rid the city of its present undercover betting. Bookmakers reap a harvest in all Government buildings and private offices despite all attempts at their control. The city's fans, denied legalized betting, are betting surreptitiously, which is never a healthy state of affairs.

Washington was a pioneer among racing centers. But in old Georgetown, a track was operated in 1769, when England still ruled the colonies. Out in Brightwood, the stable that harbored Gen. Grant's string of thoroughbreds still stands. Racing was a fit sport, apparently for George Washington, Lord Calvert and the other notables down through the ages who typified Americanism and progress. Twenty-three States have recognized it. The District has its chance to leave the ranks of the laggards.

Louis' Cuban Bout Is Not Canceled

Gastanaga Fight Is Still on, Says Jacobs, But May Shift Scene.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Dec. 18.—Conflicting statements from various sources today produced an air of considerable uncertainty as to whether Joe Louis, the Detroit "Brown Bomber," will fight Izzy Gastanaga at Havana December 29. The promoter, Mike Jacobs, made it clear, however, that the fight has not yet been canceled.

Jacobs, en route to Havana to investigate conditions, denied a Detroit report that the fight already had been called off because of political unrest and the prospects of a small "gate." He admitted, however, that there was a possibility that it would be canceled or moved to the United States.

The New York promoter said he would not have any definite announcement to make until his return.

From Havana came the word that it was all news to the officials there who are connected with the promotion. Havana is tranquil and the advance sale of seats has been good, they pointed out, and so far as they could see there was no reason why Jacobs should be worried over political conditions.

The first news that the bout might be canceled came from John Roxborough, one of Louis' managers, who told the Detroit Free Press that the bout was "off now as far as we are concerned."

The official announcement would come from Jacobs in Havana, he said, but added, "we feel it would be taking too much of a chance to take Joe away down there with so much trouble going on. Reports indicate the bout wouldn't draw enough to make expenses."

Georgia, G. W. Dropped From 'Bama' Schedule

Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 18 (AP).—The Alabama football schedule for 1936 includes Tulane and Loyola, of New Orleans, as new opponents, replacing Georgia and George Washington University.

September 26, Howard College, at University.
October 3, Clemson, at University; 10, Mississippi State, at University; 17, Tennessee, at Birmingham; 23, Loyola, at New Orleans; 31, Kentucky, at Lexington.
November 7, Tulane, at Birmingham; 14, Georgia Tech at Atlanta; 26, Vanderbilt, at Birmingham.

It Pays to Advertise, Cardinal Scout Hopes

St. Louis, Dec. 18 (AP).—Gone are the days when a baseball scout gum-shoed his way through the minors. Now they're planning to advertise.

Charley Barrett, St. Louis Cardinals' "ivory-hunter," said today he was going to have a special tag for his automobile bearing the inscription, "St. Louis Cardinals' Scout."

"That way," he explained, "everyone will know I'm in town, and, if they know any prospective ball player, they'll hunt me up and tell me about him."

Gallico . . .

Interested in Tiff Between Jacobs And Culbertson

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Mr. Michael S. Jacobs, the modern Tex Rickard, is doing some public niggling with Ely Culbertson, the bridge player, over the forthcoming bridge stunt at Madison Square Garden next Monday night, and in these days of high-pressure publicity, it is a little difficult to tell whether the boys are really angry at one another. Mr. Jacobs, it seems, has planned to capitalize on the great human yen to kibitz by staging the finale of an international match between a French and American team of bridge players in the public pits of Madison Square Garden, and charge admission to look on. As far as I can determine over the telephone to Mr. Jacob's office, Mr. Jacobs himself being on his way to Havana, Mr. Culbertson is in a pet with our Mike because he is planning to commercialize a pure amateur sport.

The players in the Garden will operate somewhat like goldfish in a sound-proof glass box from which the bidding will be piped via the public address system. Correction! Latest flash bulletin from Madison Square Garden! The players will not operate somewhat like goldfish in a glass box. The players objected to being goldfish. They will be locked up in a nearby room and no one will see them at all. But the bidding still will be piped from wherever they are playing, and I regret to have to inform you that the bickering will not, thus the juiciest part of a good bridge game will be missing.

Play will be indicated on a gigantic vertical table by human cards. A novel idea, and when there are two or three ways of bidding and playing a deal, hands will be replayed so as to give the bridge fiends an opportunity to learn something. Prices seem to run from 50 cents to $3, and if there are a lot of people there, every one connected with the affair will be agreeably surprised, because it is questionable how much fun it is going to be to kibitz when there is no shoulder over which to look.

ONE of the things I had looked forward to (with the use of high-powered field glasses) was catching the looks of baffled rage on the faces of the players when their partners did the wrong things. Also it seems a shame to deny the audience the benefit of the post mortems.

Reid Kilpatrick, president of Madison Square Garder, himself a bridge player of no mean accomplishments, is staging this show, and he says it wouldn't do to have the players visible because there are frequent long spells of cerebration before a card is played during which he feels the audience would go wild. Anyway, Mike's office has a letter from Ely Culbertson deploring the commercializing of this healthful sport, and Michael in a carefully worded reply made public to the press answers: "May I add—as one promoter to another—that I am amused at your holy terror over the prospect of commercializing a sport which I am informed has given you a couple of million dollars."

Life somehow becomes much sweeter when promoters and big shots commence calling one another names, and I hope that Mr. Culbertson will not take Jacobs' letter lying down. Apparently in his missive, Mr. C. referred to the pure altruism of his play for the Schwab Cup in London to which Michaels replies, "You refer to your contest for the Schwab Cup. Am I misinformed that the match you refer to was played as an advertising stunt for a department store—Selfridge's of London? I hope I have been."

THERE are other acid references in Michael's screed which ought to make Mr. Culbertson very angry—I hope, angry enough to do something about it. If only the players would consent to the goldfish bowl arrangement, Mr. Culbertson could purchase himself an arena box, sit in it all by himself, and yell "wrong play!" all evening. One might even toss a brick at the people occupying the glass house.

It sounds like a novel evening, and it ought to be intensely interesting to bridge players. The audience will have the advantage of seeing all four hands at once and if nothing else, there ought to be some pretty fair husband-and-wife rows developed among the kibitzers. I feel it my duty to be present next Monday night to report the shenanigans, if any.

Group Rules Outsiders Eligible

Champions Must Defend Crowns in 6 Months or Be Dethroned.

By Bill McCormick.

THE Boxing Commission met in solemn conclave yesterday to decide on District championships and from the meeting emerged only one man officially designated a titleholder here—Phil Furr, ruler of the welterweight division in Washington.

Several other perplexing points were cleared up by the commissioners, however, and the meeting was perhaps the most significant in many months.

Furr was the only boxer recognized as a champion because he is the only boxer to win and defend his laurels over the 15-round distance required in title bouts here.

It also was decreed by the commission that in the future a title must be defended within six months or the championship will be declared vacant and that residence in Washington was not a requisite for competing for any local crown.

The commission also ruled that a defending champion coming in over the weight for his division automatically would forfeit his title to the challenger, provided the latter comes in under the limit, regardless of the outcome of their contest. Furr recently entered the ring over the 147-pound welterweight limit against Sid Silas in a title contest.

It was ordered that no bout will be recognized for a local title unless specifically designated as such by the commission. The commission also announced that it will entertain challenges for recognition for the various titles vacant at the present.

Another important ruling was made when it was decided that in the future judges as well as a referee will officiate at all college bouts in the District. This is in accordance with the Intercollegiate Boxing Association's rules, which state that "the use of judges is encouraged."

To Start by 10 P. M.

A rule also was adopted requiring the main bout of any show be put in the ring ready to start not later than 10 p. m. This rule was adopted at the request of the Boxing Writers Association for the convenience of the public and the press. In most instances this edict will necessitate the main event being shown before the semi-final, a procedure usually followed in other boxing centers.

The commission also directed that Promoter Joe Turner be required to explain to them the status of Adolph Wiater, the Chicago heavyweight, who had been signed to meet Marty Gallagher.

Wiater was signed to meet Gallagher at the time of the Levinsky bout, but was sidetracked in favor of the Kingfish. He appealed to the Chicago commission, which, in turn, appealed to the District solons of sock, and Turner agreed to use Wiater at a later date.

When an available date popped up, Wiater pleaded illness. Now the commission wants Turner's version so the Chicago moguls of maul may be informed.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase Plays Alumni Tomorrow

A star-studded line-up featuring Bill Guckeyson, the Maryland U. star, and James Cross, coach at Sherwood High School, will take the floor for the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High alumni tomorrow night in the junior high school gym, facing the present 1936 edition in the annual contest.

Others expected to face Coach Kupka's team include Eddie Johnson, of Maryland U., Bob Althause, Bill Jobes, Tom Lodge, and other members of county championship teams. They will be favored over the present club that has but an even break in four contests. A dance will follow the contest.

Colonial Frosh Turn Back Roosevelt

Hold High School Rivals to One Field Goal to Triumph 20-6.

GEORGE WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY'S high-geared freshman basketball team added another victim to its fast-mounting list of vanquished District high and prep outfits yesterday by smothering Roosevelt High, 20 to 6, at the Roosevelt gym.

Boasting a team comparable to the great Colonial yearlings of 1934, the 1935-36 edition already has trimmed Eastern, Tech, Western and Central.

The latest victim, Roosevelt, was limited to one field goal—a real tribute to the Gibraltar-like defense of the freshman team. Silverman, guard, made the 2-pointer. Meanwhile, G. W. yearlings stormed through the Roosevelt sentinels to amass a 10-to-3 lead at half time.

Faris High Scorer.

Faris, left forward, with five field goals, carried off high-point honors, while Brennan, with eight markers, gave a demonstration of eagle-eyed shooting from the free-throw line, where he dumped in six foul baskets.

Roosevelt, under the Litman regime, however, gained considerable consolation in the knowledge that the freshmen did not run up as large a score on it as they did on other high school teams.

Shepherd Quintet Beaten by Wilson

Fox and Mitchell Lead in 38-30 Victory.

Paced by Fox and Mitchell, Wilson Teachers College turned back Shepherd State Teachers, 38-30, last night at the Wilson gym.

Fox, ringing up seven field goals, scored 15 points, while his mate at guard, Mitchell, chalked up 10 points.

Wilson led, 21-17, at half-time, and for the next 16 minutes the two quintets battled tooth-and-nail for possession of the ball.

The score tied at 27-all, Wilson unleashed its triumphant splurge, with Fox and Mitchell the spearheads.

Billy Mitchell, invading center, played a bang-up game, scoring 10 points.

Wilson plays Bridgewater College tonight at the latter's court.

Sherwood Five Wins Over Hyattsville, 30-15

Sherwood High School made an auspicious debut under Coach Jimmy Cross yesterday, swamping the visiting Hyattsville High five, 30 to 15, on the Sandy Spring court.

The visitors made a fight of it in the first half, trailing only 7-12, but trailed, 20-11, at the third period and succumbed to the sharpshooting of Fraley and Lansdale in the last half. The former led the scorers with 14 points, while Moran was Hyattsville's most consistent scorer with 6 points.

They're Saying So:

By Lewis F. Atchison.

BEST story of the week concerns the young darlings at a select Virginia school for girls who mailed the dean's name to a radio breakfast club with the request for the tune, "How'm I doin'." . . . next morning the sedate old pedagogue heard herself inducted into the club—conducted by a hillbilly announcer, incidentally, with the following apology—

"Dean ——, of —— College, has requested the popular number, "How'm I Doin'," but unfortunately I do not have the record. Instead, I'm going to play for her 'Old Rockin' Chair's Got Me."

Joe Stankus, star southpaw of the Treasury team in the Government Baseball League, has been transferred to a post in the Virgin Islands . . . friends of Joe Freschi, of the champion Blue Flame nine, and Audrey Costello, petite bowler, expect to hear wedding bells peal after the Yuletide . . . Pat O'Brien, the screen actor now appearing at a local theater, played football at Marquette . . . after his act Friday night he hot-footed it over to the National for a peek at the "Scandals" . . . Nick Nicketakis, southpaw hurler who figured importantly in Georgetown's 1936 diamond hopes, strained his arm last summer and his career may be ruined . . . tried the foolhardy stunt of pitching three games in two afternoons and the old wing wouldn't take it . . . "Bottle" Cox, he of umpiring fame, has not been seen since the Umpire Association's banquet where, it is reported, he consumed double portions of everything on the menu. . . .

Second best story of the week is that of a sports writer en route to Florida who stopped off in Washington to spend an evening with some old cronies . . . his Southbound special departed at 3:15 o'clock the following morning and it was imperative that he be on it . . . but it was also quite important that he bend the elbow with the boys for the sake of auld lang syne . . . so he smartly hired a messenger to trail him and make certain he reached the depot at the appointed hour . . . and he did.

In Boston last Saturday night, Frank Carideo was supposed to appear with the former Notre Dame stars against a crack collegiate eleven, but he failed to show . . . the crowd gave vent to some throaty demands for Carideo . . . so the promoters hastily outfitted a sub in Carideo's jersey, No. 27, and announced that he was on the bench, but unable to play because of an injury . . . Bill Formwalt, Hampden-Sydney athlete, will help coach Episcopal High School's teams next year . . . Rome Schwagel, Georgetown publicity man, will spend most of his Christmas vacation looking over Big Ten basketball teams . . . Most appropriate name for a bowler, Charley Spillman . . . Prisoners at the Minnesota State Penitentiary, who are enrolled in the University of Minnesota extension courses, have a higher scholastic average than day students taking the same courses, it is reported . . . and I don't doubt it.

St. John's Five Trims W.-L., 24 to 20

ST. JOHN'S basketball team won a thriller from Washington and Lee, of Ballston, yesterday at the latter's gym, 24 to 20.

It was the Saints' fourth straight victory.

Counselman, left guard, with 11 points, and R. Wheeler, Little Generals' forward, with 11 points, shared high-point honors.

The Saints were forced to fight back after trailing for three quarters.

At the end of the first quarter, with both teams guarding doggedly and grimly, the Little Generals led, 5 to 4. At half time the home boys were ahead, 11 to 9, and with one quarter left the Saints were still trailing, this time by 15 to 16.

The real thrills were crowded into the final eight minutes, when the invaders made their rousing comeback. Counselman, chucking 'em in from all angles, set the burning pace, aided by Reges, center, and the Saints pulled ahead by a 4-point margin. Three times in succession Counselman dribbled down the floor, and as many times did he sift through the opposition to score the baskets that put the Saints ahead.

Silver Spring Eleven Face Maryland Preps

The Silver Spring Merchants will meet the Maryland Preps at 3 p. m. Sunday on the District line field in Silver Spring in the season's final football game.

A victory over the Takoma Firemen last week gave them a chance for its best season with a victory over the Marylanders this week.

G. W. High Five Will Oppose Roosevelt

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Dec. 18.—Afternoon basketball will be presented here for the first time tomorrow afternoon in the George Washington High School gymnasium when the Presidents play host to the Roosevelt Rough Riders at 4 p. m.

The local five will be out to extend its season's record of four victories in a row.

George Washington started their season last Saturday with a victory over Washington-Lee, and on Monday and Tuesday of the week won over Mount Rainier and Western, respectively.

Coach Givens probably will start the same lineup as in the other games—Burrell and Enniss, forwards; Shu, center, and May and Capt. Nugent, guards.

Roosevelt will present a veteran lineup with Kolius and Thompson, forwards; Beamer, center, and Silverman and Bailey, guards.

The Columbia Fire Department will play its second home game of the season Friday night at Armory Hall, opposing the Fort Myer post quintet.

Theodore Beach's St. Mary Celtics will make their Alexandria debut Saturday night at Armory Hall, meeting the Fort Belvoir five. The Washington Boys Club and the Times-Herald senior teams will perform in the preliminary attraction that will start at 7:30 p. m.

Rosslyn Girls Continue to Set Pace

Team Wins Over Temple in Ladies District Bowling League.

AWAY of stopping the fast-stepping Rosslyn girls is the problem confronting the seven other teams in the Ladies District League. The task was made more difficult last night when the leaders strengthened their hold on first place by humbling Temple three games on the Rosslyn drives, shooting high game and set with 564 and 1,611, respectively, Blanche Wootten and Capt. Evelyn Ellis featured the victory, each chalking up a 346 set. The former was aided by a 141 game.

The second-place Lucky Strike girls were taken over the hurdles in two games by the third place Arcadia team at Arcadia, and the Bill Woods, led by Billie Butler's 126 game and 338 set, gained an odd-game decision over Convention at Lucky Strike. Lucille Young was the top bowler in Swanee's two wins over National Beer at Convention Hall.

Davis Float reached the heights in the Nautical League at Rosslyn, breaking the season record for high game with 662 and tying the total pinfall with 1,780. The big game was the result of Bob Clouser's 172 game, Galt Davis' 154 and Charlie Haverty's 145. The other two members of the team were both under the 100 mark.

Two junior duckpin teams from Central High School will lock horns this afternoon at 3:30 at the Arcadia alleys, when the Central High first team rolls the Jewish All-Stars. Ernie Hauser, former D. C. junior champion; Julian Himmelfarb, Billy Dowling, Bob Fellers and Rocco Nocero, will represent Central, while the All-Stars are flanked with such junior stars as Allan Jeweller, Julie Singer, Dave Singer, Morris Bortnick, Louie Edlovitch and Ellis Burke. A bitter rivalry exists between the two teams and each will have their own group of scholastic rooters.

Aldie Five Beaten By Mount Rainier

Visitors, Downed 24-7, Held to 2 Field Goals.

Mount Rainier High School, champion of Prince Georges County and runner-up for the Western Shore title for two straight years, broke into the win column yesterday by defeating Aldie High School, of Aldie, Va., 24 to 7.

Every player on the Black and Gold team saw action. The Mounts' defense was air-tight, allowing only two goals from the floor. The Virginia team scored only one point in the last half.

Tillie Scott, Leo Baldwin and George Taylor led the Mounts' offensive. Earl Miller played a great floor game for the winners.

Golf Stars Leave For Nassau Open

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., Dec. 18.—Three score golfers sailed for Nassau today to renew their chase of the cash prizes that annually lure them Southward.

Headed by Horton Smith, of Oak Park, Ill., whose 72-hole 281 brought him top prize of $2,500 in the $10,000 Miami-Biltmore Open, the linksmen moved upon the Bahamas' capital hoping to share in the $5,000 purse posted in the annual British Colonial Open.

Among those aboard the boat was Bobby Cruickshank, of Richmond, Va., who was going back to defend the crown he won last year.

Buffalo Beaten By Eley in 3d Fight

Colored Welterweight Is Superior in 10-Round Arena Feature.

BILLEY ELEY, up-and-coming young local welterweight, settled once and for all any doubts as to his superiority over Gene Buffalo, from Philadelphia, in a hectic 10-round main bout of an all-colored boxing show at Turner's Arena last night. Billy slapped the speedy Philadelphian unmercifully to take the unanimous decision after a contest as full of fouls as a poultry farm.

Eley, who was awarded a charitable draw and an equally charitable win over Buffalo in two previous enounters, found the answer in the rubber match. Carrying the fight to Gene almost throughout, he completely nullified the flashy attack which is Buffalo's chief stock in trade from the very outset. By the end of the scheduled distance, Buffalo was barely able to remain right-side up, but still was punching away valiantly in the general direction of his sturdier opponent.

Wins Only Two Rounds.

On The Post score sheet, Buffalo was credited with winning only two rounds—the fourth and fifth—and he was given an even break in the sixth. After getting off to a bad start by allowing Eley to slap him around in a most disconcerting manner for three rounds, the eventual loser rallied for a trio of rounds, but dropped back on the losing end in the seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth.

Eley fought perhaps the best fight of his career and always stronger than Gene, he was at his peak physical condition last night. Buffalo punched and punched with his sweeping, but harmless wallops, and they had no effect whatsoever on Eley. Eley, usually much slower than Buffalo, tossed almost as many punches as the Philadelphia lad—and they carried three times as much authority.

Eley heeled, butted and elbowed Buffalo from the outset. After suffering many such indignities, Buffalo began to employ practically the same tactics, but drew rebukes from Referee Muggsy Morris, who had countenanced everything but biting from Eley.

Four preliminaries scheduled for six rounds completed the card, which was witnessed by only 750 people. In them, Jack Grant, a local heavyweight, scored a fourth-round technical knockout over Jim Lamar; Bobby Green won on a decision from K. O. Clark; Meyer Rowan decisioned Baby Kid Chocolate, and Ted King scored a one-round knockout over Eddie Lewis.

Detroit Voted Outstanding '35 Team

Champs in Baseball Top Poll for Fourth Year; Minnesota Second.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—The Detroit Tigers, world champions of baseball, have been chosen by the country's sports experts as the outstanding team of the year.

The Tigers' selection in the fifth annual Associated Press sports poll, with points tabulated on a 3-2-1 basis as voters listed three teams in order of preference, makes it the fourth straight year in which the world baseball champions have been voted the top team of the year.

In 1931, the first year of the poll, Southern California's football Trojans won the honor, but since then the nomination has fallen to the New York Yankees, New York Giants, St. Louis Cardinals and now Mickey Cochrane's Tigers in that order.

Wins by Wide Margin.

Polling 209 points, the Tigers copped first place by a wide margin over Minnesota's unbeaten football team, which took runner-up honors for the second straight year. Minnesota gained a clear margin over rivals for national gridiron honors, with 162 points. Southern Methodist was third with 64 points and Princeton's powerhouse was next with 41.

The Tigers were chosen for the way they rallied from slow starts at the opening of the season and in the World Series against the Chicago Cubs, plus the fact experts generally figure the major league baseball season, lasting more than five months, is a more severe test of team stamina and ability than any other sport.

The choice of the Tigers was by a more decisive margin than the selection of the Cardinals a year ago. The Cardinals outdrew the Minnesota Gophers only by 26 points in the 1934 poll. In first place votes this year, the Tigers led the Gophers, 46 to 29.

Track Team Hailed.

In addition to the Tigers and the three football teams, other aggregations which received top-ranking on two or more lists were the University of Southern California track team; the University of California crew, and the British Davis Cup team.

Several experts suggested Notre Dame's football team turned in the greatest single team performance in one afternoon when it put across three touchdowns in the final quarter to overhaul Ohio State.

The tabulation of the poll on outstanding teams of 1935, showing point totals, follows:

Team	Sport	Pts.
1. Detroit Tigers, baseball.....		209
2. Minnesota, college football....		162
3. South. Methodist, college football		64
4. Princeton, college football.....		41
5. Chicago Cubs, baseball

Gift of Roses Wins at Tropical Park

Great Haste Wins Place Position

Camino Real Is Beaten, 16th Losing Favorite in 18 Races.

By the Associated Press.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., Dec. 18. Favorites continued to travel a rough road with the running of the third program of the local meeting this afternoon. The fourth race, a 6-furlong test for $2,500 platers, served as the best offering and also resulted in the biggest disappointment when A. C. Rose's four-time Maryland winner, Camino Real, failed to finish in the money. He was the sixteenth losing choice in 18 races run up to this time.

J. U. Gratton's Gift of Roses, second choice at $6.30 for $2, was a handy winner by two lengths under the efficient handling of little Freddie Schraudenback, an apprentice. Miss A. Doris' Great Haste drove to the place, a half length before R. H. New's Canterboy. Camino Real broke well but was quickly disposed of by Gift of Roses. The favorite pulled up lame.

Gift of Roses opened up daylight over Great Haste and never faltered, completing the 6 furlongs in 1:12 3-5. Canterboy performed evenly and easily to beat Camino Real.

Completes Triple.

The Canadian combination of Owner J. E. Smallman, Trainer George Alexandra and Jockey Watson completed a triple by virtue of the easy score of the veteran Ilchester in the fifth event. Carrying 120 pounds and paying slightly better than 4 to 1, Ilchester followed the early pace of Shot Proof, Chimney Top and Hogans Fox. Watson shot the Smallman representative into the lead at the eighth pole and Hogans Fox was beaten a length and a half, with Chimney Top a close third.

Scotch Queen, closing at better than 10 to 1, eked out a head victory over the heavily backed M. J. Brennan in the curtain raiser.

John Werring, paying $28.40, added to the list of upsets in the second contest. Fighting it out with Queen Vic and Albuquerque to the stretch turn, John Werring then stuck his head in front and gradually drew away under strong pressure.

The Smallman Stable and Watson accounted for both ends of the $52.80 daily double as a result of Clarksdale's galloping triumph in the third race.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ILCHESTER, $10.20, $5.70, $3.50; HOGANS FOX, $5.70, $4.80; CHIMNEY TOP, $5.60.

ILCHESTER ran a great race. He handled his weight well and, rated along on the outside, ran into lead entering stretch, drew away easily in final furlong. HOGANS FOX ran around the whole way and made a game effort. CHIMNEY TOP was kept close to the pace, finally raced SHOT PROOF down, took lead, but weakened in last furlong. SHOT PROOF broke alertly, was sent to the front with a rush, displayed keen speed for six furlongs, then tired as if short. WAR PLEDGE ran up on the heels of SAINTLITE, stumbled and almost fell. SAINTLITE was cut down badly and was pulled up. OVERSTIMULATE was outrun.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 4:43. Off at 4:43½. Winner, F. M. Alger, jr.'s ch. g. (3), by Hourless or White Satin—Sarah Grinser. Trained by J. Copland, jr. Value to winner, $375; second, $75; third, $40; fourth, $10. Time, 1:40.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WHITE GINGER, $17.00, $7.60, $4.30; HIGHEST POINT, $5.10, $3.60; SMEAR, $3.60.

WHITE GINGER moved up and into lead at end of half a mile, drew out, but tired and just lasted to win. HIGHEST POINT, under a hard drive, closed gamely and was working for the winner down. SMEAR broke slowly and trailed far out of it for seven furlongs, came with a rush in run through stretch. CHATTERDOO was well up all the way. FIRE STAR was rushed into lead, set pace for six furlongs, then tired.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:17. Off at once. Winner, W. N. Adrians' ch. g. (6), by Trojan—Whisper Bells. Trained by H. Jacobs. Value to winner, $375; second, $75; third, $40; fourth, $10. Time, 1:39.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAJOR GENERAL, $4.20, $3.10, $2.40; DAN SKILLING, $7.90, $3.90; TOP HIGH, $4.40.

MAJOR GENERAL slipped through on inside entering stretch, took lead, but had to be ridden hard to win. DAN SKILLING, well up for half a mile, was pinched back at far turn, recovered and closed very fast. TOP HIGH was hard ridden the last half mile. JODA displayed good speed for seven furlongs, then tired as if short.

with Bill Bennings.

Tropical Park, Dec. 18.

Dear Al:

For some time I have let the winners come and go with bare mention of them. It was my idea that the "poison pen wolves" who write such lovely letters to me would recognize my shift toward modesty and either stop writing or send me a word of encouragement. The classic communication in my collection is the one which arrived on a postal card and read: "I always like to see the Bennings selections. I go over them carefully each morning. When I have checked them off, I eliminate them as possible winners and then start to pick my own horses." But, as I was saying, I have not blown my horn for some time. So hold your hats, fellows, Mrs. Bennings' lovely boy had four winners today—Clarksdale, $7.80; Gift of Roses, $6.30; Ilchester, $10.20, and Major General, $4.20. And M. J. Brennan was beaten a head in the first race. The meeting is three days old and the best bet has won each day—Advising Anna, Western Lad and Major General. Now let go of your hats, fellows. BILL.

First race—Two maiden juveniles which made excellent showings in previous races here seem destined to battle it out for the purse in the day's opener. They are Cicary and Muscle In. I prefer them in the order named. College Boy has worked well and may make a money appearance.

Second race—Albuquerque has been out twice in the last three days. Opening day he was last, today he set the pace for half a mile before quitting and tomorrow I'm going to try to make him win. Takes off seven pounds which is enough to make him hold his own in the stretch. I do believe. The Smallman entry of Billie Wise and Center March is due respect as is Balmacan.

Third race—Major M. has been out of action since Pimlico. I recall a race behind Jay Jay in which this horse was repeatedly blocked. Previous to that he was fourth in a maiden affair. Clocker Mike says he has had a nice work and I'm going to attempt to slip him over tomorrow. Keokee and Fanle for the place and show. Mike gives Vitofol a chance.

Fourth race—Portden may need an off track to show to best advantage but he was such a fit horse at Bowie that I'm going to him regardless of track conditions and that 117 pounds. Fitkin and Gallant Miss for the place and show. Feudal Lord comes off a distance race and may do it but I'm passing him up.

Fifth race—Little Dinah retains that early speed that makes her a threat in these abbreviated sprints. She gets in with only 100 pounds and may surprise from that rail position. Top Dog is the one to beat. Spixi to take care of the others.

Sixth race—Now that Joan D. has graduated and goes a longer route we can look for some better things. This one has a lot of stretch kick and those who can remember a certain race at Pimlico with Meade up will have no fears about the ability of this filly over a distance of ground. Free Spirit and A. O'Connell for the place and show.

Seventh race—Salut d'Almour had a lot taken out of him in reaching the leaders last out but wasn't beaten off very bad at that. Meets his kind tomorrow and with a sharpener behind him, we may look forward to a set of brackets. Pass Shot and Black Watch were knocking at the door yesterday and will be in the thick of this battle.

On the Air Today

ADD the name of the "Beauty Box Theater" to the programs involved in the usual end-of-the-year shifting. The "Beauty Box" changed from N. B. C. to Columbia effective January 11. The new hour will be Saturday night at 8.

Also add "Clara, Lu and Em." Two notices have come to this desk in the last week in regard to the Northwestern University girls who made good on the networks. One is from the girls themselves and advises that the original intention was to continue the program through "Clara's" sojourn to the hospital while the stork made his appearance, but that "Em's' illness, which makes an operation necessary, is the final word. The act will be forced off the air.

The other notice, from an ear-to-the-ground gentleman, says that the girls apparently failed to draw their usual audience approval this fall and hence are going the way of all radio shows not ringing the bell with the public.

Their case will be interesting to follow as they have been reported as saying that their radio retirement would be dated by the refusal of their sponsor to renew. In other words, they have no intention of continuing in radio as a sustaining program feature.

Railways, Ships, Autos, Maintain Steel Demand

Outlook Good Despite Drop in Ingot Production.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 18.—The Iron Age steel review reported today a further small decline in operations, but said the outlook was for recovery in the new year. Ingot production for the current week was estimated at 55½ per cent of capacity against 56 per cent in the previous week. Another decline is looked for next week, according to the summary.

"Though consumers generally are paring stocks in preparation for inventory taking, the cumulative effect on mill operations to date has been slight," it added.

"The high rate of activity in the automobile industry, expanding railroad buying, a revival of private shipbuilding, a rise in construction work and prospective increases in the operations of fan equipment makers indicate that the general trend of steel demand is still upward.

Auto Gain 44 Per Cent.

"Automobile assemblies for December are now estimated at 400,000, and the total for the year will approximate 4,135,000 units, a gain of 44 per cent over 1934, and the largest output since 1929. Retail demand for cars has exceeded expectations; the most pressing problem of the industry is to keep used car sales abreast of the new car sales.

"The award of 10,000 freight cars by the Pennsylvania Railroad will mean wide distribution of the 110,000 tons of steel required among the mills in the territory served by that line.

"Close to 15,000 tons of hull steel will be required for the transatlantic vessel placed by the United States Lines with the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co."

The publication's scrap composite, representing the average of heavy melting steel prices at Pittsburgh, Chicago and Philadelphia, has declined from $13.42 to $13.33 a gross ton, following a 25-cent a ton recession at Chicago.

At New York, the summary reported, Italian interests have established bank credit for the purchase of upward of 100,000 tons of steel scrap on a cash basis.

Power Output Again Registers New High

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—Once more electric power production soared to an unprecedented peak, reaching 1,983,431,000 kilowatt hours for the week ended December 14, according to the report of the Edison Electric Institute issued today.

Meanwhile, the Associated Press adjusted index declined to 104.3 from 104.6 the previous week, indicating that the increase was less than seasonal. A year ago the index stood at 96.6.

U.S. Rubber Consumption.

New York, Dec. 18 (AP). — Consumption of crude rubber by United States manufacturers in November is estimated at 42,778 long tons against 42,436 for October and 34,748 (revised) for November, 1934, according to the Rubber Manufacturers Association. Domestic stocks on hand November 30 were 303,162 long tons against 317,850 on October 31 and 362,826 on November 30, 1934.

Silver Crisis Looms as Price Fades 3c More

New York Quotation Is 55¾ Cents; 51.06 in London.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 18.—World silver markets apparently faced a new crisis today after ten days of uninterrupted declines in various world centers. Imported bar silver was cut 3 cents an ounce in New York to 55¾ cents, the lowest since February 26 and the widest break since May 2, this year, when the price dropped 3¾ cents to 71¼.

Silver brokers in London, the world's chief market, finally fixed a price of 23 pence an ounce, or 51.06 cents, 1⅛ pence lower than Tuesday's quotation, after many hours of bickering. No business was transacted. News dispatches from the British capital told of a lack of bids from the United States Treasury, principal taker of silver for many months. The bullion exchange board in Bombay was reinsilver until Sunday, owing to ported to have prohibited business chaotic conditions in London and New York.

Today's quotation, posted by Handy & Harman, leading bullion brokers, carried the price of silver 9⅝ cents an ounce lower since the first of the current declines occured on December 9. Prior to that time the metal had remained at 65⅜ since August 15.

London, Dec. 18 (AP).—Bar Silver continued its hasty retreat today when London brokers set a price of 23 pence an ounce without attracting bids. This was a reduction of 1⅞ pence from yesterday's price, or about 4.17 cents an ounce.

Corporations Make Executive Changes

Edward J. Doyle has been reelected president of the Commonwealth Edison Co., the post he resigned in February, 1934, when he and others connected with the Insull Utilities System were under Federal indictment. All the defendants were subsequently acquitted.

Fred L. McCarty has been elected president of R. Hoe & Co. Previously he was vice president and general manager.

The promotion of F. W. Nichol, vice president of International Business Machines Corporation, to the post of general manager is announced by Thomas J. Watson, president of the company.

Henry J. Cochran, of New York, has been elected a director of National Biscuit Co. to succeed the late John N. Conynham.

H. S. Muroe has resigned from the board of Newmont Mining Co.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent

Stocks Advance; Silver Slide Continues; French Franc Strong; Cotton Lower.

New York, Dec. 18.—Rising prices for stocks brought enough interest among traders to lift the turnover to around 1,750,000 shares. Price advances, with the exception of a few issues, were held to small figures, but they were general. Bonds were firm in the poorer sections. Commodities were mixed. Silver tumbled. May wheat rose half a cent to 98½ cents a bushel.

Better prices were the rule in all sections of the stock list, but the main interest continued in a handful of speculative favorites. The star performers were the Radio B and the common shares. B stock, on a 3-point gain, sold at the highest price since listing in 1929. The common moved up a fraction on trading that amounted to about 10 per cent of the total stock volume to the highest price in three years.

Bulls Take Heart.

Much of the interest left over from Radio went into the airplane stocks on talk of Government orders. Douglas, Bendix and Wright were the leaders. Western Union responded to its dividend resumption by a 2 points jump, followed by profit taking. National Biscuit and Gimbel preferreds rose 5 points. A. O. Smith had another of its good days and rushed up half a dozen points before much notice was taken of it.

In the railroad section the buoyancy of Great Northern, which rose to the best price in four years, and the forward movement in Nickel Plates and Pere Marquettes occupied attention. The motor group was firm and narrow, although Auburn managed to break away for a 2-point run-up. Fractionally higher prices were paid for food, tobacco, store, rubber, amusement, accessory and chemical stocks. Steels hardened and mail orders held their improvement.

Oil shares slowly lengthened their prices. Silvers receded with the metal market. Coppers were firm, as were the golds, although Homestake fell 20 points on one sale.

Improvement.

Silver held its ground as the center of financial interest, although the fall in price aroused no apprehensions. Rather the decline awakened hope of a return to sense on the part of the American fiscal authorities, regardless of their interpretation, until now, of their duties under the nonsensical silver purchasing act. Foreign exchanges were mostly firm against the dollar, in spite of the apparent breakdown in negotiations for ending the Italian troubles in Africa. Relief over the lifting of the sanctions threat to foreign trade in general far exceeds anxiety over unsettlement caused merely by confining the conflict to Italy and Ethiopia.

French francs rushed up above their parity of 6.633 cents today for the first time in many weeks. Some brokers explained the strength on the theory of short covering produced by the most recent vote of confidence given the Laval government, which did not solve French political and financial difficulties, but merely postponed meeting them until after Christmas. The rise in francs helped all other gold currencies. Sterling was steady and former silver currencies were immune to the latest break in the spot silver price.

Meanwhile silver's retreat turned into a rout. The Treasury apparently abandoned the foreign field altogether, at least the London position, and the price of silver there fell more than 4 cents an ounce. The mark-down in quotation here was 3 cents, bringing the price to the lowest since last February. Plainly, silver in world markets is being allowed to seek its own level, as quite properly it should do. Nobody is going to be hurt by the change in the Government's policy except those silver speculators who counted too strongly and too long on the essential stupidity and supineness of our policy. Much remains to be done to clear away the mess at home, but something to be thankful for is that the affair looks better as regards foreign silver.

Helping the British.

When the Treasury put its world silver buying policy into reverse, it may be recalled, Senator Thomas pointed to the British lion as the animal that was making a sucker out of the United States. The British, he inferred, had succeeded in getting the Chinese to abandon silver for a managed currency tied to the pound sterling, and, since the Treasury would not buy the silver which China needed to sell to keep her exchange tied to sterling it was further inferred that the British objectives would be checkmated.

Because China stabilized on a managed currency basis at the bottom, and probably undervalued her currency, and because the maneuver probably will bring into equilibrium her balance of payments, if indeed it does not give her a favorable balance, it seems unlikely that China will need to sell her silver or that she can be embarrassed in maintaining her currency at the present pegged rate.

Instead of countering the British plot, if any, the Treasury's latest performance in silver probably will remove one of the greatest worries the British have had since the United States embarked upon its price-raising, silver-buying policy. That worry was that the price of silver would go so high that the intrinsic value of the rupee would exceed its face value. That would mean stripping India, as China had been stripped, of her circulating medium, forcing deflation, depression and enormous damage to British foreign trade. Whether the thing was done by accident or deliberately after negotiation, the effect is to give the British a good deal of Christmas cheer.

Buying Boom Sets Five-Year Christmas Top

All Sections of Country Report Substantial Gains for Season.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 18.—A Nation-wide survey by the National Retail Drygoods Association indicated today that retail Christmas sales have expanded almost 10 per cent over last year for the first half of December. Based on telegraphed reports from merchants in representative cities, the increase is virtually equivalent to a 20 per cent improvement over the 1933 Christmas period.

If it is maintained, said Channing E. Sweitzer, managing director of the association, the prediction of a $4,500,000,000 retail business for the month will have been fulfilled. Department store sales, he said, then will have surpassed any since 1930. The gain already recorded compares with a 10 per cent increase for the entire month of December, 1934, over the preceding Christmas season.

Every region shared the increase, the report showed. The gain in New England was placed at 7 per cent; in the Middle Atlantic States, 8 per cent; the Middle West, 10 per cent; the South, 9 per cent, and the Far Western States, 7 per cent.

Large buying crowds, rapid turnover and of sales staffs increased beyond plans made at the start of the season, were reported. Some stores said their sales figures to December 15 were higher than in any year since 1929, and one in a resort city wired news of a 117 per cent gain.

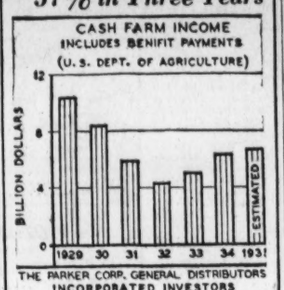
Farmers' Income Up 57% in Three Years



Boston, Mass. Dec. 18.—The cash income received by our farmers has steadily increased during the past three years, so that 1935 receipts should be close to 57 per cent above the low year of 1932. Nearly 8½ per cent of the cash farm income in the first ten months of this year was direct Government benefit payments.

2 District Banks Declare Dividends

Directors of the American Security & Trust Co. have declared the regular dividend of 2 per cent and an extra dividend of 2 per cent on the capital stock, it was announced yesterday. Both dividends are payable January 10 to stockholders of December 31.

It also was announced that directors of the Liberty National Bank had declared a semi-annual dividend of $1.50 per share, payable January 15 to stockholders of January 7. The transfer books will not be closed.

These disbursements follow dividend payments recently declared by the Lincoln National Bank, Munsey Trust Co. and the Bank of Commerce & Savings.

Wheat Yields Gains Made in Early Trading

Pit Operators Await Crop Estimates by Government.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 18.—Helped by pronounced strength of European wheat markets, including 3⅝ cents a bushel overnight jump in Rotterdam, Chicago wheat prices averaged moderately higher today. The fact that the final United States Government crop report for 1935 was due after the close did a good deal to restrict speculative buying here.

After a maximum rise of 1⅜ cents, Chicago wheat futures closed easy at the same as yesterday's finish to ⅝ higher, May, 98½; corn, unchanged to ¼ up; May, 59⅜@59½; oats, ¼@⅝ advanced, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 10 cents.

AUCTION SALES

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 20, 1935—
THOS. J. OWEN & SON, Auctioneers.
1431 Eye Street Northwest.

TRUSTEE'S SALE OF VALUABLE ELEVEN-STORY AND BASEMENT BRICK-STONE AND CONCRETE FIREPROOF BUILDING USED FOR STORE AND OFFICE PURPOSES, LOCATED AT THE NORTHEAST CORNER OF VERMONT AVENUE AND L STREET NORTHWEST, KNOWN AS THE "VERMONT BUILDING."

With leave of court obtained on November 25, 1935 in the case of the National Realty and Securities Company, Inc., debtor, Bankruptcy No. 3297 in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, and because of default in the terms and conditions of, and by virtue of a certain deed of trust executed by Isadore Freund and Amelia Freund, his wife, dated March 25, 1924, recorded among the land records of the District of Columbia, April 4, 1924, in Liber 5183 at folio 342, et seq., and at the request of over two-thirds per centum of the holders of the bonds secured thereby the undersigned substituted trustee, by appointment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, dated August 12, 1931, in Equity Cause No. 53026, will offer for sale at public auction in front of the premises on FRIDAY, DECEMBER 20, 1935, AT FOUR O'CLOCK P. M., the following described land and premises, situate in the District of Columbia, and which is described as follows: All of Lots "A," "B" and part of lot "C" in John Daly's subdivision of lots in square Two hundred and fifteen (215), as per plat recorded in Liber N. G. at folio of the records of the office of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia, together being contained within the following metes and bounds, viz: Beginning for the same at the southwest corner of said lot "A" and said square, and running thence northeasterly along the line of Vermont avenue One hundred and thirty-one (131) feet six (6) inches to a Ten (10) foot wide alley; thence southeasterly along said alley Fourteen (14) feet eight (8) inches; thence south Twenty-eight (28) feet three and one-half (3½) inches; thence west four (4) feet; thence south Eighty-five (85) feet to L street, and thence west along said street, Sixty-two (62) feet four (4) inches to the place of beginning; together with all buildings, improvements, rights and fixtures thereon improved by the Vermont Building located at the northeast corner of said premises, avenue and L street northwest, including all furnishings, fittings and personal property of every kind which said trustee is authorized by said deed of trust to sell and convey.

TERMS OF SALE: One-third of the purchase price to be paid in cash on or before the twentieth day of January 1936, balance in two equal installments payable on or before one and two years from date of sale, respectively, with interest thereon at the rate of five and one-half per centum per annum from day of sale, said interest payable semiannually and to be secured by first deed of trust on the property sold, or all cash at the option of the purchaser. The said trustee will receive bids from anyone offering to bid who shall not at or before the hour of sale, or any adjournment thereof, deposit with said trustee, as a pledge that such bidder will make good his bid in case of its acceptance, a deposit of $10,000 either in cash or certified check on a bank or trust company acceptable to the undersigned trustee made or indorsed payable to the trustee, or in lieu thereof bonds of the par value of $20,000 in form and transferable, and also secured by said deed of trust said bonds to have all unpaid coupons attached thereto. The deposit of any unsuccessful bidder will be returned to him immediately after the sale. The said trustee reserves the right to reject any and all bids and withdraw the property from sale. Adjustments with respect to rents, assessments, insurance, rentals, income from operation of property, interest and all other adjustments shall be made as of the date of sale. The said trustee, however, is to continue to manage and operate said property and collect the income therefrom from date of sale to date of transfer upon existing terms as set forth in the deed of trust. After settlement of said sale said trustee will not be responsible for any bills or expenses incurred in the management or operation of said property, or expenses of title examination, conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps, etc., are to be at the cost of the purchaser. Terms of sale to be complied with on or before January 20, 1936; otherwise, the trustee reserves the right to forfeit said deposit or to resell the property at the risk and cost of defaulting purchaser upon the foregoing terms, after seven days' advertisement of said resale in some newspaper published in Washington, District of Columbia, or with or without forfeiting the deposit the trustee may avail itself of any legal or equitable rights against the defaulting purchaser.

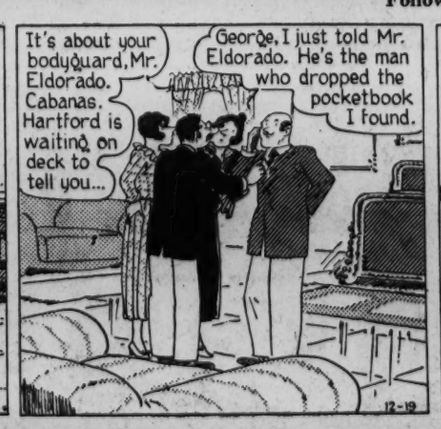
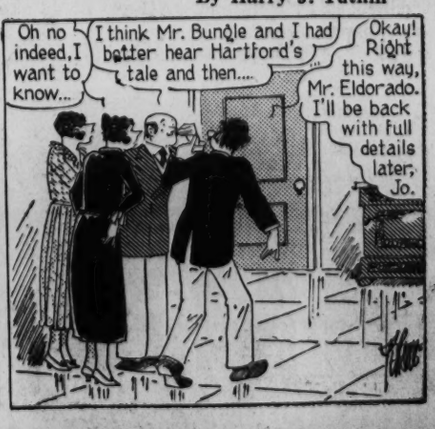
George, you're so pale. And you say this man Cabanas is..
Listen, are we alone? I mean no one but us four. Fine. Listen...



It's about your bodyguard, Mr. Eldorado. Cabanas. Hartford is waiting on deck to tell you...
George, I just told Mr. Eldorado. He's the man who dropped the pocketbook I found.
12-19

Oh oh! That proves Hartford's story right up to the hilt.
What does he say, dad?
Ah Peggy, I'm afraid all this excitement may be a bit too much for your mother.
McNaught Syndicate, Inc. N. Y.



Oh no indeed, I want to know...
I think Mr. Bundle and I had better hear Hartford's tale and then....
Okay! Right this way, Mr. Eldorado. I'll be back with full details later, Jo.

Christmas Dances Set.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., Dec. 18.—Four social affairs have been announced for the Christmas season here, beginning with the annual girls' dance Christmas night in the Anthony Wayne Hotel. The Country Club dance is set for Thursday, December 26. The Alpha Chapter of the Tau Kappa Phi Sorority will sponsor a dance on Friday, December 27, in the Anthony Wayne Hotel, and the events of the holiday season will close with the annual New Year's Eve dance in the same hotel.

Church Calls Pastor.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Mercersburg, Pa., Dec. 18.—The Presbyterian Church here voted yesterday to extend a call to the Rev. J. D. Edmiston Turner, of Avondale, to become pastor of the church, succeeding Dr. J. G. Rose, who retired from the ministry recently. Turner was educated at Lafayette College and the Princeton Theological Seminary.
